THE PRINCE OF WALES has given up his jumping horses. But he has not given up the pastime, free from danger, of inventing new clothes.

He startles London, says the Associated Press, by appearing at a boys' boxing championship wearing "a double-breasted dinner jacket" (that's what Americans call a tuxedo), a soft shirt, no starch in it, soft cuffs, a soft, turned-down collar, a black bow tie, and a "grey-checked pullover," whatever that may be.

That wouldn't startle anybody in America. Herbert Swope, who is twice as big as the Prince of Wales, and knows him intimately, has worn all of that outfit, with the possible exception of the "pullover," for a number of years.

The important thing, every American should remember it, is the soft collar.

Hard, starched collars, pressing on the big blood vessels on either side of your neck, stop the flow of blood to the brain. And what is worse, they press upon the pneumogastric nerve hidden away under one of those great blood vessels, most important perhaps of all the nerves in the body.

It isn't necessary to wear a sloppy collar, or necessary to look like a little boy after a hard day's play. Modern soft collars keep their position, and do not press upon the neck. WEAR THEM, DAY AND EVENING.

There is an old saying that you cannot keep a squirrel on the ground. Wall Street prices are like that squirrel. It seems impossible to keep them down.

All the warnings, usurious interest rates, all solemn hesitations of the "sold out bulls" have no effect.

Yesterday, for instance, Radio stock jumped up more than 23 points, crossing $500. Call money was only 6½ per cent. It is hard to form a corner in money, even with the aid of billion dollar banks.

Bears will have to wait a little longer.

Berlin seeks to establish a "talkie" trust in Europe, a $100,000,000 company, to control Europe's talking moving pictures.

That would be a small company for America. William Fox, originator of the movietone talking pictures, recently purchased control of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company and the Marcus Loew theaters. He has in his hands now an organization amounting to at least $200,000,000.

Professor Einstein, 50 years old yesterday, retired with his wife from public view, to think about relativity and the fourth dimension, and wonders why people make such a fuss over him.

He is especially amazed at the great interest in his discoveries in the United States. And he well may be. Not 10 men in the United States understand them.

A special master appointed by the court decides that the big telephone company, having invested hundreds of millions of additional capital, is entitled to a bigger return. The company will probably get $22,000,000 a year more.

To him that hath shall be given. At least all must admit that the company gives good service and that its young ladies that say "Thank you" are marvels of gentle, polite efficiency.

There is a plan to bridge the English channel by constructing two islands with bridges over the intervening space. The job would cost about $500,000,000, which, the promoters think, "could be borrowed in America."

What becomes of the recent solemn statement that "United States capital is not wanted in England?"

Two thousand four hundred lawyers of New York city have organized "a fight for a repeal of the dry law." Ordinarily you would say, "Then the dry law must go."

But on the other side of the line are many million Baptists, Methodists and others that intend to keep the dry law. And they will keep it.

The crowd stood well back, watching the race, but Charles Traub, grinding a newsreel camera, knew it was his duty to show the machine, traveling four miles a minute, coming head on. His stood with his camera planted slightly to one side of the straight course. When the driver lost control the car leaped and rolled.

It was too late for Traub to save himself. His body was laid out beside that of the driver.

That is the price paid sometimes for news pictures.

Robert Barry Dillworth, 14, son of a wealthy Newtonville family, was dead today, the victim of an accidental shot fired from an army rifle by his playfellow and neighbor, William Thomas Reed Kincaide, 15, of Walnut st., Newtonville.

The two boys were examining the weapon at the home of young Kincaide's step-father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Chesterton. As Kincaide demonstrated the gun's action, believing the rifle unloaded, it was discharged. The bullet

M'CARTHY IS FIN. COM. COUNSEL

As the Finance Commission opened its public investigation today of the $1,750,000 Exchange st. widening project, it was announced that James J. McCarthy, public administrator of Suffolk County, would act as special counsel for the commission at the hearings.

Because of the crowd expected, the scene of the public meeting was shifted from the Finance Commission quarters on School st. to the School Committee room in Beacon st. An imposing array of witnesses was under summons to testify when the hearing opened at 2 p. m.

SCREAMING, CRAZED VICTIMS RESCUED BY NATIONAL GUARDSMEN

Many towns in southern Alabama were under water today with the fate of hundreds in doubt as numerous creeks and rivers which traverse that section of the state continued to rise.

Regular channels of communication were cut off and reports of conditions were received mainly from refugees and from outposts of the National Guard, which was in charge of rescue work.

The loss in damage to property will run into millions of dollars, it is estimated.

At Elba, Ala., where 4000 persons were marooned by the high water, an observer who communicated with the National Guard base from a tree a mile away reported that only the tops of taller buildings could be seen above the water. He could hear the screams of the marooned citizens.

According to the story of a woman who escaped from Elba in a motorboat, 350 students of the Elba elementary school have been marooned since yesterday, and have fled to safety in the second-story of the building. The children were frantic and screaming for help.

National Guardsmen on their way to the town rescued 37 persons. When communication was established with the town through an observation post a mile away, the Guardsmen reported that all of the smaller houses were completely submerged.

Brewton, Ala., was under water and communication was cut off when the telephone exchange on the second floor of a building was flooded. Other towns flooded included Flomaton, Castle Berry and Big Creek.

Thirty-five persons were rescued at Big Creek and 37 were taken to safety from the vicinity of Elba by National Guardsmen.

At Windham's Mill, the soldiers on their way to Elba found

CONVICTS NEAR PANIC IN STATE PRISON FIRE

The 950 prisoners housed up in State Prison were in near-panic early today when fire swept the laundry supply drier room.

Except that the prisoners were securely locked in cells, many might have been injured in a possible stampede during the blaze that resulted in a damage to the laundry building, constructed in 1927.

Spontaneous combustion is believed to have been responsible for the fire whose damage is estimated by Warden James L. Hogsett at $40,000.

Warden Hogsett said he believed an overheated steam pipe started the blaze but he declared he will make a personal investigation.

An armed guard exceeding in strength only by the force patroling the prison on the night of the Sacco-Vanzetti execution, was on duty throughout the long battle with the flames.

AGED MAN BEGS JUDGE TO SHOOT, NOT JAIL HIM

Homeless, penniless and weakened by age and privation, Jeremiah Barry, 83, stood up in East Cambridge court today and, with one hand resting over his heart, dramatically asked Judge Joseph F. Donovan to shoot him rather than send him away as a vagrant.

The court explained he desired simply to place Barry where he would be cared for, and the old man, who had testified his son-in-law put him out of the house, agreed to accept a sentence of three months in the House of Correction.

His gaunt form clad in soiled, ragged clothing, with a gray stubble accentuating the hollows in his cheeks, Barry stood in the dock taking an active interest in the proceedings despite his age and condition.

He listened intently while Patrol-

FOUR ESCAPE DEATH IN BROCKTON SHOE SHOP

Brockton, March 15.—Four men were near death today in the M. A. Packard Shoe Co. plant when a connecting rod broke in the engine room, hurtling a huge cylinder head across the room.

Engineer Leon C. Richardson, who only 10 seconds previously had passed in front of the cylinderhead, was trapped in the steam-filled room, but quickly shut off power and stopped the engine.

Only a closed steel door between the engine room and an adjoining room saved William S. Morse, a department superintendent; Patrick Kennedy and William Wade from annihilation.

They were directly in the path of the hurtling cylinderhead had the steel door been open.

The impact of the cylinderhead against the door knocked Morse off a chair and when he had scrambled to her feet again, he and Kennedy and Wade dived out of a window.

Other than the blown cylinder, the breaking of the connecting rod did no damage to the engine.

MOTHER, OWN SLEUTH, FINDS AND TAKES BABY

After acting as her own detective and tracing her six-months-old daughter from Long Island, N. Y., to a Revere boarding place, Mrs Dorothy White, 20, of Ridgwood, L. I., led Revere police to the child's bedside before daylight today.

Judge Raymond said he disliked to convict the prisoner of being a vagabond, and asked:

"Have you no home?"

"I had a home, Your Honor," replied Barry, "with my daughter, but she married a Frenchman and I am Irish and we couldn't seem to agree.

"He put me out of the house, but he didn't put me out without a fight. I am still a scrapper."

The court asked where the daughter's home was located, but the defendant gave only vague answers, finally declaring he did not know.

"I don't like to find you guilty of being a vagrant," Judge Donovan

DARES DEATH IN FALLS TO DODGE POLICE QUIZ

Pawtucket, R. I., March 15 (AP)—The police wanted to question John Malone—and he knew it.

And so to evade questioning he braved the chill waters of the Blackstone river today and faced a perilous descent over Pawtucket falls.

It all happened when two police inspectors stopped Malone as he and his wife were driving their car into downtown Pawtucket. Malone jumped from the car and ran Mexico City, March 15—Poison gas will be used for the first time in Mexican warfare in the battle for Durango City, it is reported here. Gas shells will be thrown by federal artillery into the rebel positions while aviators drop bombs from the sky. The battle at Durango was expected to start at any moment today.

92 RESCUED IN FLOOD

Montgomery, Ala., March 15—Lieut. Kelsoe, in charge of a rescue detachment, reported to Gov. Graves today that the tide had turned and that the water was beginning to fall in the vicinity of Elba, Ala., where 4000 residents have been marooned. Ninety-two have been rescued. The officer reported he was in a position from which he could see Elba citizens on the housetops and that the water had fallen about 10 inches. His detachment, he said, picked up 13 persons.

Washington, March 15—National headquarters of the American Red Cross today wired the Governor of Alabama an offer of assistance and reported to him that three relief workers were en route.

LINDY FLIES NORTH; MAY STOP AT SAN ANTONIO

Brownsville, Tex., Mar. 15.—Col Charles A. Lindbergh took off from the local airport today at 10:06 in his new Curtiss Falcon plane for an unannounced destination. He headed north after dipping in salute to a crowd of 2,000 gathered at the field.

Col. Lindbergh was accompanied to the airport by Col. E. G. Johnson, commandant at Fort Brown.

It was said Lindbergh might make a stop at San Antonio.

between 25 and 30 persons in a flooded store, and rescued three women and four children, the others refusing to be taken out. They told the soldiers that the residents of Elba were in more need.

The soldiers tied their motorboat outside the store and rowed to effect the rescue. Among those taken out was an infant.

Efforts to carry on radio communication between airplanes and the rescue parties were made, but the planes were forced to return to their base because of the heavy fog.

While Alabama was hardest hit, many other sections of the country were suffering from floods. Communities in Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois felt the effects of spring freshets, but unless rains set in, no trouble was expected.

The overflow from the numerous rivers and small creeks in southeastern Alabama extended as far as Gotham. Four men were believed to have been drowned when their boat overturned near Troy, Ala. They were Tom Jacobs, Roy Hutchison, Willie Hollins and Ross Clark, all of Troy.

Rescue Planes Forced by Thick Fog From Flood Area

Montgomery, Ala., March 15 (AP) Alabama National Guardsmen had succeeded in rescuing 37 persons, a majority of them women and children, from the inundated regions around Elba, Governor Bibb Graves was advised today.

The rescue party was composed of the vanguard of guardsmen sent from here early yesterday.

The message was the first direct word from the guardsmen.

It said the refugees had been removed to safety from a point six miles from the city of Elba, adding that they were pushing on toward the flooded city in motor boats. No casualties were reported.

A government plane dispatched from Maxwell field for observation in the flooded area and to maintain radio communications with the National Guard rescue base, returned to Montgomery after running into a dense fogbank at Troy. The plane, piloted by Lieut. Charles M. Gravatt, with Sergt. R. F. L. Choate as observer, will return to the area when visibility clears.

A second plane dispatched to the flooded area was believed by Gravatt to be flying blindly in the fog. It is piloted by Lieut. John W. Persons, with Lieut. Byron A. Glover as observer. Gravatt said he could not see the ground from a low altitude.

Couriers Rescue Four From Flooded Home

Troy, Ala., March 15—Direct communication with Elba has been impossible since early yesterday afternoon. Reports of the plight of residents there reached Enterprise and were relayed here by couriers.

With the couriers were four refugees, a Mrs. J. C. Johnson and her two small children and a Miss Hughes, who was identified at Enterprise as a county home demonstration agent. They were taken from the four feet of water that stood in the Johnson home by two men who paddled to the front door in a canoe. Mrs. Johnson said she did not know the fate of her husband.

Flood Menaces Along the Mississippi River

Chicago, March 15 (AP)—The flood menace had shifted today from its northern tributaries to the Mississippi river itself. Most of the lesser streams were getting back to normal after a three days' rampage, but reports of water seeping through levees and a threatened break had spread consternation among some of those living near the Mississippi.

Many communities in Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois were still suffering today the effects of the spring freshets of the last few days.

The Mississippi was threatening to break through a levee on the Illinois side, north of Burlington, Ia. Inhabitants of Gulfport, a village of 100, have moved to higher ground while crews attempted to reinforce the levee. Water was dribbling through holes apparently made by muskrats. The little Minnesota left its banks and forced persons living near Brown's Valley, in western Minnesota, to vacate their homes.

Gales and Rain on Gulf Increase Flood Menace

Gulfport, Miss., March 15 (AP)—Winds of gale force from the south reaching a velocity of 60 miles an hour swept the gulf coast accompanied by a violent thunderstorm and excessive rainfall.

The rain added to the volume of water in numerous streams throughout Southern Mississippi, where flood levels already have been reached. No damage was reported. Heavy rains were reported today at points north of here as far as Meridian, in the watersheds of the Pearl, Biloxi, Wolf and Pascagoula rivers, where streams were overflowing, sections of highways were under water and railroad tracks were threatened.

Flood Swamps Autos, Says Girl Refugee

Birmingham, Ala., March 15 (AP)—Conditions in flood stricken Elba were described in a telephone interview with the Birmingham Age Herald by Miss Allie Hughes, Coffee County Home demonstration agent, one of five known refugees who have escaped.

"Water submerging the tops of automobiles flowed through the Court House sq.," Miss Hughes said.

"Hundreds of families had sought refuge in the court house when the flood menace had first began to lick at their homes, and at 5 p. m. hundreds of other families were marooned on the roofs of their houses or had sought safety in the more substantially built business houses.

"We are used to floods in Elba, and when this one struck we paid little attention at first.

PUPILS DISMISSED.

"The water started rising early Thursday morning and by 9:30 a. m. had risen to a height to cause school authorities to dismiss their pupils.

"By 12:30 p. m. the water was well into the residential district and families were moving to higher ground. In another hour the water poured down the business streets and excessive rainfall.

"The rain added to the volume of water in numerous streams throughout Southern Mississippi, where flood levels already have been reached. No damage was reported. Heavy rains were reported today at points north of here as far as Meridian, in the watersheds of the Pearl, Biloxi, Wolf and Pascagoula rivers, where streams were overflowing, sections of highways were under water and railroad tracks were threatened.

TOOK TO CANOES.

"At first residents of the town drifted about in canoes in the shallow waters, somewhat inclined to take the flood as a joke.

"In an hour or two conditions changed, and what at first appeared to be an expensive lark grew to be a grim, serious situation, in which strong men battled to save lives and homes."

Considerable difference of opinion was evident at City Hall as the probe got underway, some officials openly ridiculing the idea that the Finance Commission would reach any result and pointing to the Sunday baseball inquiry as an example of what outcome might be expected.

Others pointed to the fact that from the start, even before the $1,750,000 order for purchase of a fractional lot of land at Exchange and State sts. was passed by the City Council, the Finance Commission had fought to block the project and thus made it a pet.

The principal arguments against the undertaking," the commission chairman told the council, "are the magnitude of the cost as compared with the results to be accomplished, the danger of increased traffic through the financial district and the contention that Exchange st. at its present width on which parking is practically impossible, is as serviceable as a widened Exchange st. with parking allowed on both sides, in accordance with the Boston practice.

"The cost of the widening has been variously estimated at $1,700,000 to $3,250,000. No one can now tell what it may finally amount to.

"At least an effort should be made before the die is cast to come to terms with the owners of the property to be taken. If their terms are within reason the widening might be worthwhile. If not, the project should be abandoned."

The mayor's message asking for an appropriation for the Exchange st. proposition was sent to the City Council on September 10, 1928. The Finance Commission's letter of warning and advice was received October 1. The Council took up the measure October 22, tabling it for one week, and then passed the mayor's order on October 29 by a vote of 20 to 2, Councillors Bush and Parkman voting against it.

Lufkin Denies Hub Is Decadent Port

Speaking at the Boston City Club before the Knights Templar, Collector of Customs Wilfred W. Lufkin, vigorously asserted that the port of Boston is far from being in a state of decadence, pointing to the fact that $50,000,000 in duties were collected and turned into the National Treasury last year. Two-thirds of this huge sum were derived from wool imports, and the collector predicted that Boston would continue as the wool center of the country, if not the world.

tators is identification of some of these witnesses, for beyond the announcement that city councillors had been called, the commission maintained secrecy as to the names of others served with summonses.

The fact was not hidden, however, that some of the most widely known Hub financial men would be compelled to testify.

Rebels Threatened to Execute Their Own Officers

Mexico City, March 15 (AP)—A dispatch from Vera Cruz today said that the rebel troops led by Gen. Jesus Aguirre at the start of the present revolt became demoralized at Santa Lucrecia on the approach of the federal army and told their officers they must either surrender or be executed by their own men.

An attempt was made to secure favorable terms for surrender but this was refused.

CALLES READY FOR ATTACK ON DURANGO CITY

that the city was held by a small force of "fanatical elements." It quoted Gen. Calles as advising President Emilio Portes Gil that he intended to make Durango and then proceed to Torreon.

The federal generalissimo said it was his hope not to let a single insurgent escape."

"I hear, however," he added, "that the unloyal may take flight to the north, something which I am trying to avoid by all means."

Although previous government announcements have been unusually sanguine as to the progress of the campaign in the north, bulletins last night and early today lacked the optimism of the past.

REBELS TO MAKE STAND.

Capture of Durango will open another rail avenue to Torreon for the federal forces, but there was in the government announcements a note indicating a feeling that Durango may be more difficult to take than was heretofore believed.

The city has about 40,000 population, and, like Torreon, splendid natural mountain fortifications.

At Torreon, 150 miles northeast of Durango, the rebels are reported to be strongly entrenched and in some circles there was less hope of evacuation of the city without a battle than previously had been the case.

Five federal columns were moving in the direction of Torreon today. Three of these came from the east under command of Gens. Andreune Saturino Cedillo and Lazaro Cardenas. A fourth offensive body, part of the force of General Calles, operated along the railroad between Canitas, Zacatecas, and Torreon.

The fifth, under command of Gen. Calles himself, was engaged in the attack on Durango, prior to a movement against Torreon from the southwest.

DRIVE TOWARD TORREON

The eastern armies have in addition to cavalry and infantry contingents four regiments of artillery for use in bombardment of Torreon if it is necessary.

Both from the east and southeast effective Mexican methods of tearing up railway lines are delaying the federal advance.

It is said here Gen. Calles will find the line from Durango to Torreon much less damaged than other lines entering the Coahuilan city, and that knowledge of this account partly for his determination to secure control of the state before the attack on Torreon.

It is known too that the attack on Durango was a necessary part of the encircling movement designed to cut off the escape of the rebels from their stronghold.

Detachments will be sent northwest from the eastern armies after they converge at Lake Viesca seeking to break the railroad rail line of communication with Chihuahua to the north.

Battle Awaited at Naco, Near American Border

Naco, Sonora, Mexico, March 15 (AP)—American correspondents today still were awaiting the expected battle of Naco. To all appearances an encounter between General Augustino Olachea's 1200 Indian federals fortified here, and General Fausto Topete, reported to be advancing on the town from Nogales with 1000 rebels, was imminent, but they have learned that "manana" (tomorrow) is a slogan of Mexican military as well as civil life.

At Agua Prieta, to the east, General Tucupicio still held the town with about 500 Mayo and Yaqui Indians, who at first were thought to be rebels, later became federals, and today apparently were of uncertain status as far as the revolution is concerned.

FIRE IN STATE PRISON; GUARD CONVICTS

An alarm was sounded from the prison office, and when the first apparatus arrived Lindsey and McGrath were battling the flames with their small hose.

Second and third alarms were sent in immediately. Acting Fire Commissioner Daniel F. Bennett and acting chief of the department Henry A. Ernst arrived on the second alarm and directed the operation.

CALL FOR POLICE

Prison officials notified the police headquarters and 35 patrolmen and two sergeants, in addition to the regular Charlestown police, assembled at the prison.

The Boston & Maine Railroad special police were assigned to duty on the tracks bordering the prison yards. Day guards living in the prison block were also called on duty and were stationed at strategic points along the walls.

Rutherford ave. and Chapman st. were lined with policemen and all automobiles were stopped while the fire was in progress.

In the prison, guards and deputies were passing in among the cell tiers, assuring the prisoners that they were in no danger.

LIFERS SEE BLAZE

The laundry is located about 100 yards from the main section of the prison. The nearest cell buildings are in the Cherry Hill section, where Jesse Pomeroy and other notorious lifers could see the glare of the flames.

Dense clouds of smoke swirled over the prison buildings and the flames, leaping several feet above the laundry, could be seen far off. Throngs of Charlestown residents left their homes to watch the fire.

Many residents on Rutherford ave. were forced to leave their homes by the smoke. The laundry building is about 100 feet from the Rutherford ave. wall.

In this section, Warden James L. Hogsett stationed guards at every few feet along the wall.

When firemen first arrived at the laundry, the flames were roaring through it so fiercely that they were unable to enter the building. A barrage of water was spread across the building, and others in the workhouse group.

FIRE ENGINES MIRED

Three pieces of apparatus became mired in the prison yard after entering through the trap under the Prison Point bridge. A wrecking crew was summoned to extricate the machines.

This delayed other apparatus. It was impossible to get the water tower through the gate of the yard.

crashed through "Bobby" Dillworth's brain.

The dead boy's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dillworth of Walnut ave., Newtonsville. The father is a prominent New York silk merchant.

The Kincaids boy told police the army rifle belonged to him. He had obtained it, he said, through the U. S. director of civilian marksmanship at Washington. From the same bureau he purchased 100 cartridges, he declared.

Weapon and ammunition were taken by the Newton authorities today.

At the time of the shooting a nearby Newtonville doctor was called to the scene. He announced that young Dillworth had been killed instantly. Medical Examiner George L. West declared death to have been accidental.

PLAN SURVEY IN NICARAGUA

Washington, March 15 (INS)—Army engineers today began organizing for the survey of the Nicaragua canal route ordered by Congress at the last session.

Maj.-Gen. Edward Markwin, chief engineer, is expected to announce the personnel of the surveying party within the next few days, and the srupendous task will be underway by early summer.

A preliminary study is being made as to the supplies to be sent to Nicaragua.

van said, "but I am afraid I will have to."

Barry drew himself up and his faded eyes flashed.

"You might as well take me out and throw me overboard," he declared. "No, I'm a game fellow," he added. "I'll stand up and you shoot me."

Judge Donovan smiled tolerantly.

"I don't want to shoot you," he explained in a kindly tone. "All I want to do is to send you some place for your best interests, where you will get care and treatment and get cleaned up, with a decent bed on which to sleep."

Barry, who had previously announced his intention of appealing a finding of guilty, was impressed with the statement of the court.

"All right, Your Honor," he replied "I'll take whatever you give me."

He was then sentenced to three months in the house of correction, and led away to the jail across the street for a bath, clean clothes and food.

SKIPPER SAVED FROM SEAS BY COAST GUARD

Salisbury, March 15—One man was drowned and another missed death narrowly today when the 45-foot flounder-dragger, Eva M. Clark, capsized in heavy surf at the south end of Salisbury beach off the mouth of the Merrimack river.

The victim, William Newman of Gloucester, lost his life while coast guardsmen from the Salisbury station fought courageously to reach him in a dory. Twice combers swamped the rescue boat and swept it and its crew back on the beach, while Newman could still be seen clinging to the mast of the overturned fishing vessel, 500 yards off shore.

When the coast guardsmen finally succeeded in pulling their battered craft to the side of the Eva M. Clark the man on the mast had lost his hold and vanished.

The rescued man was Ephriam Clark of Newburyport, skipper and owner of the capsized flounder-dragger. He gambled his life and won by striking out, heavily clothed as he was, for the beach.

Half-drowned and unconscious, he was hauled from the surf by members of the coast guard crew.

The rescue squad made the 3½-mile run from the Salisbury beach station to the scene of the accident in four minutes, using the coast guard truck. Chief Bosun's Mate Albert F. Jones had charge of the party.

China Has Ratified the Anti-War Pact

Washington, March 14 (AP)—The Chinese Legation announced today that the Chinese nationalist government has ratified the Kellogg anti-war treaty. That of Poland is expected to be deposited at the State Department next Thursday.

Ratification by Belgian Parliament earlier in the week leaves Japan the only one of the original 15 signatories to withhold approval. All of the original signatories must approve the pact before it can become effective.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Do you favor a law to penalize employers who discharge workers called for jury service?

W. H. LOCKMAN, 123 Summer st., Boston, manager—I certainly favor a law of this sort. Any employer who discharges a man because he is called for jury service should be penalized. After all it is not the worker's fault that he is called for this service. His name is drawn from a box containing thousands of other names and he must take his turn on the jury when it comes. The employer, of course, loses the services of his worker, but if justice is to be maintained jury service must continue.

JOHN MAHAR, Middle st., Braintree, auditor—I believe that this law should go through. An employer should be glad that his workers have the chance to serve on a jury. They receive actual experience in law cases and the functioning of the courts. Jury service broadens the mind of a man and encourages self-reliance. He will come back to his work a better and more valuable employe. His employer has no right to discharge him for serving the State for a short time.

EDNA CLARK, 8 Halborn st., Mattapan, stenographer — I think that any employer who is mean and cheap enough to discharge a man for serving on a jury should be heavily penalized by the State. Why should a worker suffer the loss of his job when he is only doing what he is compelled to do by the government? The employer who discharges a man is proving himself a poor citizen, and is interfering with the work of enforcing law and order.

ALICE BELANGER, 19 Whitney pk., Boston, bookkeeper—Our government would soon find it very difficult to get men to serve on a jury if they thought that they were going to lose their jobs because of this service. The finding of a jury is the only fair way that decisions can be given out by the court, and the employer who lets a worker go because he has to serve on a jury is not working for the best interests of the country.

N. E. RIVERS ON RAMPAGE FROM BIG THAWS

Pre-spring thaws and heavy rains today had swollen the Connecticut, Deerfield, Housatonic, Merrimac and other large rivers of New England, with the flood stage possibly by Sunday.

The Housatonic in the highlands of the Berkshires was on a rampage, flooding six feet over the concrete on the middle road between Sheffield and Great Barrington and and closing that thoroughfare.

A landslide on the Williamstown-to-Pownal, Vt., highway buried it 10 feet, and two autoists, Ashton Maxwell of Cambridge N. Y., and Richard R. Nichols, a Williams College student, had narrow escapes.

Fearing washouts on the railroad between Albany and Greenfield, Boston & Maine guards patrolled the tracks today.

Melting snow in Vermont and New Hampshire swelled the Connecticut until today it was 6½ feet above low level. There appeared to be no danger of a quick rise, as two years ago the Connecticut was 24 feet above low level when it reached flood stage. The river was rising at the rate of a foot in 24 hours.

Feeder streams to the north were clogged with ice, which was slowly melting. Flood gates were opened at Turner's Falls.

Ice jams in the Merrimack just above Lowell broke, wrecking the flashboards of the Pawtucket dam.

FIRE DRIVES SIX IN DORCHESTER

Five women and a baby were driven to the street today by fire on the second floor of the three-story, six-family house at 6 Balsam st., Dorchester.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Lilhan Wesalo of Suite 4. In tracing smoke, she opened a closet door in the hall of her home to be greeted by a sheet of flame that singed her hair.

She ran through the house, shouting "Fire," and occupants of the other apartments made a hasty exit. They were Mrs. Ethel Kopt, in suite 1; Mrs. David Levy, Suite 2; Mrs. Bessie Bransburg, Suite 3, and Mrs. Samuel Platzman with her one-year-old daughter, Estelle, in Suite 6. Suite 5 is vacant.

Hartley's Line May Run From Boston

Commodore Herbert Hartley, former commander of the steamship Leviathan, has been asked to head a new proposed American steamship company to operate a service between Boston and Europe, it is reported. The service has been discussed for some time, and will put New England ports into direct connection with English Channel ports. Portland, Providence and New London will be served by the line, as well as Boston. It is a move to regain for this section its former place in shipping affairs.

SKY'S HIS SILVER SCREEN

Now we'll have our pictures in the clouds and they won't be talkies! Jesse Steele, Jr., 17, of Roanoke, Va., has invented this contraption which looks like something out of the junk pile—but isn't. It's a powerful searchlight, which sheds a piercing beam upon the sky, and he is going to use it as a projecting machine and have his own sky cinema outfit. (Photo by Associated Press.)

BE YOUR OWN TRAFFIC COP

PUSH A BUTTON AND WALK ACROSS

Philadelphia's newest slogan is "Every pedestrian his (or her) own traffic cop." In the suburbs they have a system by which a pedestrian presses a button which flashes a "Stop!" light. In a few seconds the "Go!" light comes on automatically. But the pedestrian is over then. (International Newsreel photo.)

Pat's Painting Pants Perform Perfectly

The overalls robing the chassis of Pat Spinell—those paint-splashed, rugged panties of denim—saved Patrick when he fell from a fire escape 40 feet up on the new Paul Revere apartment house at Broadway and Yeaman st., opposite Revere City Hall, today. Spinelli was painting when he began to spin earthward.

All was lost—but wait! The bustle of Patrick's ballooning painting pants suddenly met up with a projection 20 feet down—and the projection hooked Pat and hung him in a very undignified position.

His cries for aid reached the ears of Traffic Officer James Dooley in front of City Hall. Officer Dooley's first impulse was to get a ladder and rescue Pat, and he did.

Spinelli, who is 22, and who lives in Hawes st., Revere, was much relieved to reach land safely.

VATICAN WILL SERVE WINES

Vatican City, March 15 (AP)—An all-Italian wine list is the feature of the luncheon menu to be offered diplomats accredited to the Holy See by the Pope on Sunday.

His Holiness will not be present, although the luncheon is to be held in the Vatican itself, contrary to tradition of recent years.

Exports 73 Million Over Feb. Imports

Washington, March 15 (AP)—February foreign trade came close to setting new high records for the season. The Commerce Department today estimated the month's exports amounted to $444,000,000, against imports of $371,000,000, and that the favorable trade balance for the month was $73,000,000.

In February last year exports were $371,448,000 and imports $351,035,000, with a favorable balance of $20,413,000. None of the February export figures in the last five years has equalled the total reported today.

2 DYING, 3 INJURED, WHEN AUTOS CRASH

MORE POSTAL STAFF CHANGES EXPECTED

More shakeups in the Boston postal service appeared today to be on their way, following one which caused a stir among the 6000 mail employes in the service here.

Postmaster Gow declared the "shift" was made to strengthen the postoffice at strategic points. He added that others would be made "from time to time" until things were going to his satisfaction.

William F. Curley, who has been acting as assistant superintendent of mails at the Back Bay station, was transferred to the Burlington ave. parcel post station as superintendent, replacing T. J. Sullivan, who has held that position for several years. Sullivan, in turn, was assigned to the office of Supt. H. Cuilis in the general postoffice.

Thomas D. Fitzgerald, who has been acting as assistant superintendent of mails at the general postoffice, will take the place vacated by Curley.

James Mackin, who has held a supervisory position in the general postoffice, and who is regarded as an expert on mailing, has been assigned to the South postal station to assist in the management of that station.

GLYNN SCORES BAN ON IRISH

Former Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, speaking at the annual St. Patrick's day meeting of Division 17, A. O. H., at Hibernian Hall, denounced the recent attempt in Congress "to place a ban upon the Irish immigrant," as "most insulting to our race."

"The origins clause of the immigration act," he said, "as now pending before the government, is, in my opinion, a direct blow at that constitutional guarantee given to all who come to our shores, especially to those of our faith in the old land who are anxious to join with the 21,000,000 others in America in upholding those glorious traditions made possible by the blood of our forefathers." He urged that a united protest be sent to Congress demanding fair play.

GIRL IS THROWN OUT THROUGH WINDSHIELD

Worcester, March 15—Two men are dying, two others and a girl were injured as a result of a head-on collision in the fog between two automobiles on Park ave., near Grove st., today.

The injured, all at the City Hospital, are:

Edward G. Lunny, 25, 140 Maywood st., fractured skull.

Fielding Crabtree, 25, 68 Beaverbrook parkway, internal injuries, fractured skull.

Leander P. Letiecq, 24, 7 Isabella st., cuts on face.

Leonard A. Crowe, 23 Prospect st., West Boylston, cut over left eye, several teeth gone, cuts and bruises on body.

A police surgeon sewed up several cuts sustained by Miss Marion E. Crowe, 18, a sister of Leonard Crowe, and she was permitted to go home.

According to the police the two cars collided with such force that Miss Crowe was hurled through the windshield of the machine driven by her brother. Crabtree was operating the other car, which carried Lunny and Letiecq.

GIRLS MUSTN'T TALK TO BOYS

Detroit, March 15 (AP)—The campus of the University of Detroit was stirred today by an announcement by the president, the Rev. Dr. John P. McNichols, that the 50 co-eds enrolled in the university would be expelled if they were detected conversing with any of the 2000 male students of the university grounds.

The ban on conversation was defended vigorously by John S. Malley, associate editor of the Varsity News, student paper.

Malley's statement said: "The president's dictum is the greatest thing to come to U. of D. in years. The coeds waylay and harass the male students. They destroy the studious and scholarly atmosphere of the college with their blandishments. It is the greatest single step forward in the history of education."

A coed reply was: "One reason Malley hates girls is because he can't dance. He's asked me to teach him how. He can't dance and the girls can't be annoyed with him."

RAIN, SLIGHTLY COOLER IN HUB

Slightly warmer weather tonight, to be followed by a cool wave Saturday night, with rising temperatures again in prospect, was predicted by the Weather Bureau today.

According to long range indications the week-end will be fair, with brisk but not cold temperatures.

The weather map resembled a strip of bacon, with successive streaks of fat and lean. There is an extensive storm area centering in Missouri accompanied by heavy rains which are causing flood conditions. Thunder storms on the Gulf Coast and heavy rains in Georgia, with 4½ inches at Macon, were reported.

The storm area extends over the entire country east of the Rockies, but back of it is a cool wave which is expected to have driven the storm ahead of it and arrived here by Saturday night. This cool wave is expected to bring a slight drop in temperature.

Behind that in turn is another warm wave, which may reach New England by the close of the week.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Mostly cloudy with some rain tonight and Saturday; slightly warmer tonight; colder Saturday night; fresh southerly winds.

To Melt North Pole for Landing of Zepp

Berlin, March 15 (INS)—A landing of the Graf Zeppelin anywhere in the ice regions of the Arctic during the proposed North Pole flight of the airship next year will no longer offer serious obstacles.

An electrically heated anchor which would melt the ice and then be frozen in after the current is turned off will make a safe landing possible without the assistance of a landing crew. Plans for the construction of such an anchor have been completed by Prof. Otto Kuhl.

Hail Mrs. Peabody for National D.A.R.

CROWNING three years of success in particularly trying times with the presentation of the deed to a $5500 D. A. R. memorial forest at Goshen to the commonwealth, Mrs. James C. Peabody today retires from the state regency of that society.

With her goes the endorsement of the state body for the office of vice-president general in 1930, when national officers will be elected in Washington, D. C.

Such endorsement carries with it the love and loyalty of 8500 women and is a vindication of the administration policy which held together that membership during one of the bitterest controversies that any women's organization has weathered in many years.

The memorial forest was Mrs. Peabody's pet project. It is with deep satisfaction that she retires from office with her dream a reality. Mrs. James Wheeler of Natick was chairman of the committee which raised the funds. The forest will be formally dedicated on April 6 with Governor Allen and other state officials cooperating with the Massachusetts Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Jas. C. Peabody

In pledging herself to carry on the policy of her predecessor, Mrs. Stephen P. Hurd, incoming regent, stressed the legislative policy of the society, which caused the factional fight on its famous "blacklist."

"We have been constantly assailed by the so-called liberal and so-called progressive groups," Mrs. Hurd said. "It is true that we do not endorse certain kinds of legislation. That position has been taken after long, careful and exhaustive study and we have arrived at definite convictions on this point.

"In the interest of the tolerance which is so constantly emphasized by our critics, we ask them to grant us the privilege which they appropriate: that of arriving at and sustaining our thoughtful convictions.

AGAINST BUREAUCRACY

"We believe in the Constitution and in cherishing its safeguards. It is essential, however, for us to understand that endorsing legislative safeguards in the interest of constitutional government is vastly different from plunging into politics. Can we do less than oppose measures which we believe are not in accord with the best good of all the people?

"We believe that our communities should shape the politics of their own affairs. A decisive change has been brought about in the last few years in the trend of attempted legislation. A thoughtful observer may well note with alarm the attempts to thrust upon the people of this nation bureaucratic legislation. The legislation which demands centralization of power at Washington is not endorsed by this society."

Membership within the society ought to indicate tacit endorsement of its principles, Mrs. Hurd declared, closing a dramatic address with the pointed reminder that "constructive criticism of our work is valuable; destructive criticism is an entirely different thing."

Tax Discontent All Over U.S., Mix Says

The federal income tax deduction on earned income should be increased from 25 to 75 per cent, in the opinion of Tom Mix one of the professional men who, as a class, are hardest hit by high income tax rates on income earned as compared with income derived from investments.

He was speaking in favor of the movement started by professional men and endorsed by Hearst newspapers to secure such a revision downward.

"I am proud to have risen from a cow-puncher to a stage and screen star and to be able to pay the large sum I do in income tax," he said, "but I think the deduction on earned income should be increased.

"In my own case my career and livelihood depend on my physical and mental health. Those are my assets. When they are gone I will be done. If I become incapacitated, my earning ceases and I would be compelled to live upon my savings. That should be considered by the government in taxing my earned income.

"I not only pay an income tax on my earnings, but the Government collects also from camera men, scenario writers and others, all of whom pay from the fruits of my labor.

HUMANS DEPRECIATE

"The Government allows no depreciation on the human machine, yet allows depreciation on an automobile. That's wrong.

"Stage and screen stars are compelled to do certain things because of the positions they occupy, which cost a good deal of money that the government makes no allowance on for deductions. For instance, I have to live in a big house and entertain in a certain manner because of the fact that I'm a screen star. Otherwise, I might be left out in the cold when it came to making contracts as it might be said 'Tom isn't one of us.'

"Another phase of the income tax law that is all wrong is the exemption allowed on children. I think a parent should be allowed as exemption the amount he really spends on a child. It is ridiculous to think parents can raise a child on $400 a year, the amount allowed by the Government as exemption.

ENCOURAGE PARENTS

"Parents should be encouraged to send their children to college, and if what they actualy spent was allowable as exemption that would constitute encouragement. The more education there is, the less poverty there will be, and we all know that poverty is 'the root of all evil.'

"I intend to give my baby a fine education and I hope she will marry a fine man and bring some fine children into the world. I think every real American feels the same way about his children and that spirit should be encouraged by reasonable tax laws. Nearly all evils have been caused by overtaxation, including one famous one that started right here in Boston because of a tax on tea. The Government should be reasonable to its citizens and thus destroy discontent."

Marshal Foch "Very Tired"

Paris, March 15 (AP)—Physicians of Marshal Foch found him "very tired in heart and body and mind" when they visited him today. They said, however, he had passed a quiet night and had obtained some sleep.

GETS $20,000 FOR LOST EYE

New York, March 15 (INS)—Mrs. Mary E. Bishop today was again in possession of a tidy sum of money. Mrs. Bishop, who once owned a box in the diamond horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera House and who later became impoverished, was awarded $20,000 in her suit for $100,000 for the loss of an eye.

Mrs. Bishop sued the Godwin Construction Company. Her complaint states she was walking past a building being erected by the company when a blasting operation caused her to be struck in the eye by a piece of steel.

1200 Buildings in Japanese Fire Area

London, March 15 (AP)—Fire involving 1200 houses and public buildings in Ishioka, Japan, was reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokyo today. Troops and firemen, hampered by lack of water resulting from drought, fought the flames all night.

HUGHES STILL TELLING 'EM

Washington, March 15 (AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, for many years as associate of President Hoover in the Harding and Coolidge cabinets and more recently an active figure in his political campaign, was an overnight guest of the executive at the White House.

Since the campaign Mr. Hughes has come to be regarded as a close "unofficial adviser" of the Hoover administration, and it is assumed that his givis gave the President an opportunity to talk over with him several subjects which have occupied a considerabel amount of his attention since his inauguration.

Report Coakley Is Much Improved

Sign This and Cut Your Taxes

To the Congress of the United States:

THE undersigned respectfully urges that Congress give immediate consideration to the proposition that there be a downward revision of all taxes on earned incomes.

This is urged because in many instances earners of salaries, wages, fees or commissions for personal services have only a few years of good incomes, and prior to and after that period have substantially smaller incomes.

Their period of better earnings, which might give them a chance to accumulate some savings, is heavily taxed. Labor in general, clerical workers, salesmen, lawyers, doctors, engineers, architects, journalists, accountants, actors, musicians, singers and members of all other professions are in the same plight in the matter of earned incomes, as compared with earnings on capital.

The use of my name on a petition to Congress is hereby granted.

800 MORE WILL HEAR GIPSY AT TEMPLE

Loud speakers were being installed at Tremont Temple today so that 800 more persons may hear Gipsy Smith at each of his noon and evening evangelistic revivals from which hundreds have been turned away at every service.

"Christ does not consist in dealing with creeds, in subscribing to creeds," the evangelist told the capacity audience that turned out despite the rain.

"Christ does not consist in joining a religious club. Christ doesn't consist in form and ceremony. Christ doesn't consist in professing religion—because it is popular to have a religion of some sort. You can have religion and not love Jesus, because the people who crucified Jesus had religion."

He soundly rebuked the "professed Christians" who have been engaged in a steady round of bridge-playing, theater-going and jazz parties while his revival is going on "instead of falling to their knees and asking God to sweep old Boston as never before."

RAPS "RICH CHURCHGOERS"

He told them in stinging tones that if they "went to the world the world will damn you—it always has damned people who have been foolish enough to go to it." He declared that the world is no respecter of persons.

He lashed at the "wealthy churchgoers" who slip their pastor a check to get rid of working for Christ, and reproached and condemned professed Christians for their greed and lust for the things of the world who "won't stop making money once in a while in the middle of the week to do a little work for the salvation of souls."

With the "isms" and "ists" that received a severe indictment at the hands of Gipsy were the "retired Christians." Without mincing words he told them, "Lots of you folk have retired—retired from Christian work. There are some districts that are dumping grounds for ex-church officials."

"WORTH A MILLION"

"Now, how much am I worth to you?" Gipsy asked, urging the crowd to contribute. He explained that the collection, however, was to defray the $18,000 budget, that he was to receive none of it. "A million dollars," a youngster near the front popped up in response to Gipsy's question.

The crowd roared and Gipsy laughed. "All right, I'll say no more. I'm worth a million," and Gipsy sat down.

150,000 Unwed and Won't in Boston! But Not Hub

London, March 15—American girls, who dote on the whirlwind courtship and thrill to a sweetheart's immediate response, should take a tip from the spinsters in the County of Lincolnshire, who simply do not want to get married.

"Leave us alone," they say. "We want no husbands to worry about and no children to look after. We want peace."

There is no shortage of men in Lincolnshire—in many parishes, in fact, men are in the majority. But half the 208,878 women in the county are unmarried and a large percentage of those married did not wed until late in life.

"Lincolnshire women have always been slow to wed," an elderly Boston spinster said today. Boston is one of the principal towns in the county.

"In Lincolnshire, the man courts the woman for more than a year before he begins to talk marriage. Then, for another year he goes on asking her. If she accepts, then after a decent Interval, usually another year, they publish the banns. I have known couples who have carried on their love-making for a dozen years."

But under prodding, Miss Spinster disclosed the real reason for the long courtships and the Fabian policy of the women.

"Our men are such a poor lot," she said. "They think of nothing but turnips and pigs and have nothing to say for themselves. A man from a village near here has courted me for 20 years, and all he has ever given me is a ham every Christmas. He bought me a brooch at a fair one year, but the stone fell out next day.

"No, I'm better off as I am than I should ever be if I were married. Maybe, if George and I put up the banns, he'd forget to give me the ham at Christmas!"

New York, March 15 (AP)—The number of crimes of violence in New York during 1928 showed a sharp increase over 1927, the annual report of the police department, made public by Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, disclosed.

BOOKMAKER IS 'TOO HOT' TO KIDNAP

Chicago, March 15 (AP)—Joseph B. Drell, known as one of Chicago's wealthiest bookmakers, proved "too hot" for his kidnapers and they set him free, after holding him all day for $50,000 ransom.

"I didn't pay them a cent," said Drell, owner of a chain of cigar stores on the West Side and the operator, police said, of several handbooks. "They wanted $50,000 and maybe I would have given it, but about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon they bought a newspaper and read what the papers had to say about the kidnaping.

"One of the men said, 'This fellow's getting too hot for us.' So they blindfolded me and put me out of their car in Niles Center (a North Side suburb)."

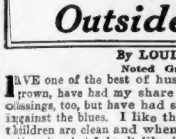
Drell was a captive for nine hours. He was kidnaped at the point of revolvers by three men who crowded his car to the curb just after he had driven his two children to school.

Police Lieut. Phil Carroll, in charge of the investigation, professed skepticism of Drell's statement that no ransom had been paid. He thought it probable that Drell was able to raise the money, or a large part of it, on short notice from his associates who, the officer said, are accustomed to keeping large sums on hand for race track wagers.

Wife Urged to Find Outside Work

By LOUISE RICE
Noted Graphologist

I HAVE one of the best of husbands and three children, somebrown, have had my share of ups and downs, but a snarblessings, too, but have had such a struggle all my life fightagainst the blues. I like the house when it is in order and children are clean and when hubby is coming home and the chairs going, but I don't like it when I am in the midst of my Sunday morning cleaning. I have suffered all my life from nous exhaustion. My husband has been willing to have me admit that is because he is considerate of me. I couldn't be a quitter. I write poetry. Could I ever do anything with? Sincerely, L. L., Somerville.



Judging from which you are suffering not nervous exhaustion, but mental. I have not a doubt but you were told and taught that woman's place is in the home and that you were always more forced to do housework.

You are more fitted for such work than any man. The unfortunate thing is that we sort out humanity into two separate classes and nature doesn't! Many a man who wearily struggles with a business is a fine home-maker and many a woman who struggles with a home has not the least talent for running one, and does it only by the grace of God and gritting her teeth.

I earnestly advise you to look about and see what you can do of a gainful nature outside your home. A shop? You have a fine sense of values.

Running an agency?

Teaching some specialty? You have a wide range.

Find something that interests you, get into it, get that maid and demand that those grown-up children of yours help to run the house. This idea that the home ought to rest solely on mother's shoulders is all wrong. You try this, m'dear.

COMPROMISE IN DRUG CASE IS BARRED

By KENNETH CLARK

Washington, March 15—"Settled—for cash."

The expectant hopes of a Washington physician that these words would be written across his case, involving charges of narcotic violations, were blasted by officials of the Treasury Department.

Dr. M. Clarence Dollman, the physician, wants to compromise with the government and sent his check for $500 to the collector of internal revenue in Baltimore. The check was cashed.

Officials of the department who review such cases strongly intimated, however, that the doctor's offer would be rejected. This decision indicates a tightening by the Treasury Department of the regulations under which physicians who may even prescribe drugs too recklessly to patients, may settle for cash and escape prosecution in court.

Dr. Dollman is under indictment to three counts on charges that he "did unlawfully, wilfully, knowingly and feloniously sell, barter, exchange and give away derivatives and salts of opium, to wit, 25 one-quarter grain hypodermic tablets of heroin hydrochloride, to one Lorraine Horner."

He also is a star witness for the Government in the trial of Mrs. Horner, socially prominent, on charges of having forged and raised Dollman's prescriptions. Testimony revealed that Dollman issued 222 drug prescriptions to Mrs. Horner in a period of a few months.

Former Helen Gould Warns D. A. R. of Red Activities in N. Y.

Trenton, N. J., March 15 (AP)—Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, formerly Helen Gould, has uttered a warning of what she regards as the threat of Bolshevist propaganda against American religious and governmental institutions.

Addressing New Jersey State convention of the D. A. R., she said a Communistic revolutionary headquarters was maintained in Union sq., New York, where papers were printed and a school was maintained.

She exhibited copies of Russian Communist publications and described the articles and cartoons.

TAX PAYMENTS TO UNCLE SAM PASS 1928

Washington, March 15 (AP)—Indications that expectations of treasury officials would be realized, that income and corporation taxes this year would equal, if not exceed, those of last year, were given today in a statement by the treasury.

The statement showed that on March 13 income taxes paid totaled $7,513,639, an increase of $315,940 over March 13, 1928. Miscellaneous internal revenue taxes also showed an increase aggregating $3,221,657.

Total income taxes paid the government this month amounted to $48,214,847, as against $42,130,226 for the same number of days last March.

B. U. JUNIORS PREPARE FOR GALA WEEK

Juniors at Boston University are in strict training for the next six weeks and they needs be with the strenuous social program laid out by their leaders for Junior Week.

Junior Week this year will last from April 29 to May 5. The features of the week will be open house night of all B. U. fraternities on Monday night, April 29; All-Boston University show, Wednesday night, May 1; field day, Thursday, May 2, and prom, Friday night, May 3. Plans are also under way to conduct a tea dance to precede the annual show.

On open house night all the fraternities of the university put their houses at the disposal of the entire student body, each house presenting a dance, concert, or novelty program. The student guests make the rounds of the various houses during the course of the evening.

On show night, May 1, the Gilbert and Sullivan Association will present "Iolanthe" at Jordan Hall. This affair, which is under the direction of Prof. Harry R. Center, was last year a feature of the week's program, when the association produced "Patience," by Gilbert and Sullivan.

The tea dance planned by the committee was formerly a regular feature of Junior Week, but has not been held in the last two years. The affair will be under the direction of the co-eds of the College of Practical Arts and Letters.

Field day at Nickerson Field on May 2 will be featured by a baseball game between Tufts and B. U.

Junior prom, May 3, at the Hotel Statler will conclude the week's festivities. Reservations for the annual dance are now being made at the university.

The committee in charge of the prom is headed by Howard Farwell of Reading. He will be assisted by Elmer Johnson of Hartford, Ct., Martin Casey of Revere, Frank J. Mooney, Jr., of Waltham, and Francis J. Craven of Holyoke. John D. Brewer of Mamaroneck, N. Y., is general chairman in charge of the entire week's activities.

CYRIL WOULD BE 'SOVIET' CZAR

Berlin, March 15 (INS)—Grand Duke Cyril, acknowledged as the sole pretender to the Russian throne, has issued a "monarchist government program" accepting the Soviet system on condition it is headed by a Czar, according to a copy of the statement received here from St. Brisc, France.

Grand Duke Cyril insists also that the Russian government restore private property rights.

The most important points are "that the peasants shall retain the land they gained through the revolution and that Russian industries shall adopt the eight-hour day.

AMERICANS JOIN STRAUSS HONOR

Vienna, March 15 (AP)—The American colony participated today in the 100th anniversary of the birth of Johann Strauss, known throughout the world as "The Waltz King" and composer of the "Blue Danube Waltz."

Delegations of American and Austrian music lovers made a pilgrimage to the composer's grave, near that of his great fellow composer, Franz Schubert.

Ex-Kaiser's Sister Fights Bankruptcy

Bonn, Prussia, March 15 (AP)—Princess Victoria, sister of the former Kaiser, has filed a protest against bankruptcy proceedings against her.

Further liabilities of 200,000 marks (about $50,000) have been revealed, although the original bankruptcy proceedings listed only 16,000 marks ($5000). The largest claimant seeks 137,000 marks on a contract for purchase of a racing stable. One of the administrators of her estate was reported today to have fled to Brussels.

Swiss Women Now Want to Cast Votes

Geneva, March 15—The women of Switzerland are making a fresh demand for equality with men in political affairs.

They argue that it is very unjust in a democracy to keep women out of public affairs. They are asking the Federal Assembly to introduce a clause in the constitution recognizing their right to suffrage and eligibility on the same footing as men.

LAWYERS WILL AID JONES LAW DEFENDANTS

New York, March 15 (AP)—A group of lawyers has organized to aid Jones law defendants.

Frederick R. Coudert, Jr., chairman, one of four former assistant United States attorneys on the committee, explained its purpose as follows:

"It was felt that such a committee of lawyers might be helpful in aiding our juries to perform their invaluable functions in preserving civil liberties.

"Since the sale of a glass of beer has been raised to the dignity of a felony, carrying penalties similar to those provided in this state for assault and manslaughter, it was thought wise to form a committee to assist those who have done nothing condemned by civilized society and who might be subject to such severe penalties.

"Aside from the law, the sale of intoxicants is not wrong. While it may be illegal, it cannot be made wrong by statute, as it is neither condemned by moral sentiment nor inherently dangerous to others.

"To endeavor to penalize such an act by the infliction of penalties hereto only applicable to the serious moral infractions brings the whole criminal law into contempt and handicaps its administration.

"We propose to fight this measure with the same vigor as the New York bar displayed in the case of the enforcement act known as the fugitive slave law."

LIFER ESCAPES THIRD TIME

Baltimore, March 15 (INS)—Jack Hart, lifer at the Maryland penitentiary and Baltimore's arch criminal who twice escaped the prison walls and boasted "They will never keep me in," today fled his solitary cell.

He unfastened the triple-locked cell door, climbed to the roof on an improvised rope and slid down to the street. He took Jack Bailey, another prisoner serving 15 years for a holdup, with him but Bailey was captured when his rope broke.

Papal Delegate Sails

Rome, March 15 (INS)—Monsignor Fumasoni, apostolic delegate to the United States, left today for Palestine and Egypt, traveling incognito.

CHARGE WOMAN FORGED A WILL FOR $150,000

Because she lost a valuable legacy through her cousin's marriage, Miss Alice G. Porter of Medford is charged by the widow of Allan A. Hooker Bromfield st. note broker, with attempting by fraud to obtain possession of his $150,000 estate.

Miss Porter has two actions pending against Samuel R. Cutler, as administrator of the estate. One is for $500,000 on an alleged promise of Hooker to pay her $100,000, and an alleged promise to leave her his entire estate, the other for $100,000 on an alleged note.

Mrs. Margaret Hooker, the widow, of Wellesley; George A. Hooker, the father, of Atkinson, N. H., and Cutler, charge all of her representations, including a promise to marry, are based on "forged" and "fabricated" documents.

MARRIAGE VOIDED WILL

Their bill in equity now before the superior court cites that on Dec. 21, 1912, before his marriage to the present widow, Hooker executed a will leaving various sums to his father, cousins and friends, including $20,000 to Miss Porter.

His marriage March 12, 1926, the bill says, revoked the will through state statute, causing Miss Porter to lose a valuable legacy, all of which was made known at the time of administration of the estate, in connection with which Miss Porter made claim to the $20,000 legacy. The will was never presented for probate.

FABRICATION ALLEGED

In pursuance of her scheme, the bill asserts, "she did fabricate a series of documents to which the signatures of Allan A. Hooker were fraudulently simulated intending by means of the combined effect of these documents fraudulently to make claim to and secure said estate."

It is charged by the plaintiffs that these "false and fraudulent" documents were suddenly produced by Miss Porter in July, 1928, without any previous notice, though she knew of the progress of the administration of the estate in November, 1927, and the settlement of its affairs, as she was frequently in conference with the plaintiffs. These documents, the bill declares, were never shown to or seen by the trusted employes and advisers of Hooker.

Rabbi Samuel Levy to Speak at Forum

The regular Friday evening forum, conducted by the Brotherhood of Congregation Beth Hamidrash Hagodol for the past four months, will be held this evening in the Crawford st., Synagogue, at 8 o'clock. Rabbi Samuel Levy of Perth Amboy, N. J., has been invited to occupy the pulpit for the evening. Rabbi Levy has chosen as his theme, "Fragments of Judaism Overemphasized."

Cantor Karl Newman, assisted by the choir, will render a musical program. This series of instructive lectures will terminate on Friday, March 22. The closing lecture will be delivered by the resident spiritual leader, Rabbi William Dreyfu.

Mayor Stresses Need for Business

"One thing the city needs today is business—nothing but business," stated Malcolm E. Nichols in his speech at the annual banquet of the West End Business Men's Association in the Hotel Bellevue.

The mayor, asserting that few people appreciated the business possibilities in Boston, spoke of the new Boston Garden as an example of what could be done in Boston by men with enterprise. He predicted that with the building of the East Boston traffic tunnel, along with extensive transit and street improvements which would be realized in the near future, valuations in Boston would be greatly increased, to the advantage of the business men.

Manchester's 'Fin. Com.' Meets Tonight

Manchester, N. H., March 15 — The special committee named by Mayor Moreau to inquire into the administration of the tax collector's office will hold its first session this evening. Appointment of this group resulted from a discussion of the grant for the tax collector's department as contained in the budget resolution. Some aldermen contend that more money is being provided than is necessary and that some of the functions of the department might be done away with or curtailed.

The Mayor named Aldermen Dana A. Emery, Francois J. Houlne and Frank F. Carroll to make the probe.

Doctors Get Break With a Steak to a Steak

Believing 'hat doctors need red meat even if some of their patients don't, and that a "steak a day makes the doctor gay," physicians at City Hospital made complaint they weren't getting enough meat. So the dietician has been ordered to furnish them the steaks they asked for.

Bootleggers Still Going, Says Lowman

Washington, March 15—Asst. Sec of Treasury Lowman does not believe the Jones prohibition penalty law has put as many bootleggers out of business as newspapers have reported.

"We have not heard of any wholesale closing up of bootleggers," he said. "Many may have stopped vending because they fear the $10,000 fine and five-year prison sentence, but it looks like they are using the Jones Law figures to raise prices and gyp customers

PLYMOUTH MAN HERO IN EPIC SEA RESCUE

Fall River, March 15—Another epic of the sea has been recorded in maritime annals with the unfolding of the first complete story of the rescue of the crew of the sinking schooner H. D. MacLean of Halifax off the Virginia Capes by Capt. A. C. Allen and sailors of the tanker Swiftscout, now in this port. Chief Officer Burgess of Plymouth, Mass., is revealed as the real hero of the rescue.

Today Capt. A. Thornhill and his rescued crew were singing loudly the praises of their rescuers, who arrived when death was at hand after a thrilling five days of trying to keep the schooner clear of the inrushing water with hand pumps.

Capt Allen, however, said the honors should go to Chief Officer Burgess of Plymouth and the men he selected to go with him to the sinking schooner to effect the rescue of Captain Thornhill and his men. Chief Officer Burgess, he said, displayed the utmost daring and was himself saved by Capt. Thornhill when he was washed overboard as he was steering the lifeboat.

Bluebirds and Robins Have Returned to Westfield

Westfield, March 15—Spring made a whoopee entrance here when flocks of bluebirds and robins arrived after their winter away. They were all wet, for they came during the rain, but they seemed mighty glad to get back. Other summer birds had preceded them, and local folk are happy over the weather outlook, as they say the birds don't go wrong.

Maine Man Starts Serving Life Term

Skowhegan, Me., March 15—Selden E. Adams, of Norridgewock was taken to Thomaston to begin serving a life sentence in State prison for killing Payson L. Randall, a neighbor, July 12, 1927.

Randall, while delivering milk at a camp in which Adams' estranged wife was living with two sons, was shot down with three bullets in his body in the camp doorway by Adams, who appeared suddenly upon the scene. He died of internal hemorrhages.

Man Injured as Truck Hits Tree

One man was injured and two others were badly shaken up and bruised when the truck in which they were riding struck a tree by the side of the State rd. in Lexington. According to Ray C. Stockwell of Main st., Ashfield, who was operating the truck, something went wrong with the steering gear so that he lost control of the machine. Alton Lille of River st., Conway, was taken to the office of Dr. James J. Walsh in Lexington.

Aliens Testify Against Hub Man

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 15—Allen witnesses testified that they paid sums of $200 and $500 to Capt. Andres Veles to be landed in either the Continental United States or an American island. Veles, a native of Porto Rico but long a resident of Boston, with others is charged with smuggling aliens from Havana to Porto Rico on the ship Calumet, a yacht formerly owned by Atwater Kent.

14 ENROLLED IN WHITE'S LONG SERVICE CLUB

Enrolling 14 new members to swell its numbers to the remarkable total of 250, the Long Service Club of the R. H. White Co., every member of which has been in the employ of the store for at least 15 years, held its annual banquet in the dining room of the store.

The enrollment of the new members proved to be the hit of the evening. Each novitiate was attired in a bonnet and a bib and were variably infants when compared with the group of 19 of the club who have been with the White organization for 34 years and more. An orchestra and a three-act play contributed to the entertainment of the members.

The club was addressed by Matthew MacCurdy, vice-president of the R. H. White Co., who said:

"I'm glad to be here and to represent the executives of the R. H. White Co., and tell you in behalf of them how much they want to thank you all for your loyalty to the organization which you serve. It is hard to realize what such a term of service must mean.

"We are constantly bringing into this business of ours young men and women unacquainted with the problems confronting us. They depend upon you for training. Members have something else to boast of besides their tenure of office. They have a service record full of accomplishments of which they all might well be proud."

The officers of the organization are George Shelley, president; Miss Margaret M. Wood, first vice-president; Philip J. Nixon, second vice-president; Miss Abbie C. Gearin, third vice-president; Miss Isabella B. Douglass, secretary, and Orrin F. Jones, treasurer. The retiring president was Miss Helen Tetlow.

Among those representing the management were Matthew MacCurdy, vice-president of the R. H. White Co., Arthur H. Sargent, general superintendent; Richard Flanagan, public ity manager, and Arthur J Kelly, treasurer.

MAY SUCCEED STIMSON

Washington, March 15—A strong effort is being made here today to have Col. Theodore Roosevelt appointed governor-general of the Philippines, to succeed Henry L. Stimson, who is in the Hoover Cabinet.

The campaign in support of the son of the famous "T. R." is being led by the colonel's famous sister Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth. She is declared one of the most influential women here, and is making a notable fight to get the Manila post for her brother.

Pigeon Found Alive Behind Wall of House

Springfield, March 15—All you puzzle fans, try to solve this one: Hearing a scratching noise from the inside of a wall in her home, Mrs. Frank C. Chester summoned T. W. Pearson of the S. P. C. A. to investigate. He removed a radiator and cut through the wall, finding a live pigeon. The bird, after being fed, flew away. It had been behind the wall since Sunday. Now the big puzzle which has got Springfield fans guessing is this: How did the pigeon get there?

'MYSTERY' GIRL TAKEN HOME

Miss Olga Jenkins, who was thrown from an automobile by men companions near Waltham, was at home 301 Washington st., Cambridge, today having been removed by relatives from Waltham hospital despite her serious condition.

The girl was thrown from the auto because she repulsed the advances of the two strangers from whom she accepted a ride, according to Inspector Tracy of the Waltham police. She said that she had walked in a daze for three or four hours before finding help at Waltham gasoline station.

GIRLS OF LEE SCHOOL TO GIVE PLAY IN FRENCH AT FINE ARTS THEATER, MARCH 22—BETTY ALDEN

VERY MUCH AT HOME IN the French idiom are certain future debutantes of the Lee School, whose scholastic path in the Lee School nurtures the secrets of the language. The evening of March 22 will find the Fine Arts Theater filled with beaming-eyed parents and interested friends of French future hostesses generous to applaud a performance of "La Foret de Seville" (The Forest of Seville), amusingly reminiscent of the Shakespearean tale of "As You Like It." Miss Betty Spalding is the author of the play, which promises to be a delightful display. Such happens in the way of parts for Miss Betty Spalding, a something had for whom the Flint Spalding will make by least a first winter

MISS SPALDING WEARS A delectable costume, the all-white of the great Isle of Spain. The comb, a delicately perfect example of the ancient art of carving is clouded amber shell an heirloom for which a grandmere of Miss Spalding shopped one day when, as a young matron she was touring Spain. Different, the costume of white satin and the balancing lace. Spanish in origin, about it so that from its cleverly contrived capital [illegible] daughter of [illegible] ville, who [illegible] duenna, a [illegible] guardian [illegible]

HAVING A WAY IN COMEDY Miss Betty Fitzpatrick, as the amusing Madame Pinkard, the American Abroad in the Gay Nineties, making her presence felt in old Seville. Miss Lorna Lockmore is the governess. Miss Frances Shea is Poppa and Miss Priscilla Dennett is the Inn Keeper's Daughter. Being a comedy with music, the presentation moves up into ambitious plane, that of the operetta. Madame Fombaron is the guiding spirit of the pre-presentation days, to her falls the pleasant and arduous duty of direction, a task for which she is plainly gifted

IT WOULD BE QUITE INCONceivable that an equestrienne of the Lorraine Liggett stamp should stay on this side of the water when the Grand National is being run at Aintree in England. The Liggetts embarked a few days ago for Liverpool with the stout intention of [illegible] stepping-base [illegible] on [illegible] brief journey abroad just now which Miss Liggett in the [illegible] Farewell plans, is made principally because of the famous race run March 22

NO GIRL WITH A TROUSSEAU in the gathering could be within a day's journey of Paris and not move heaven and earth to visit the charming city where feminine fashions first see the light. Miss Liggett looks longingly to the Rue de la Paix and the Champs Elysee for those feminine frippetries the French create with marvelous delicacy. The Liggetts do not make a long stay abroad. I believe the return sailing is already arranged, and is down for April

THE LIGGETT CROSSING TO England is via the Paris, out of New York at midnight last night on the up-to-the-moment 12 o'clock sailing by which scores of hurried American stars a few hours for business and social whirls. The Paris also takes over some members of the Vaillant family, a much traveled group that seems always taking steps for distant parts, so frequent are their comings [illegible] Vaillant and his daughter Miss Marian Vaillant are passengers for this crossing. Stephen Bowen is in the party and it likewise includes Mrs. Winston Hagen and Miss Abbie Vaillant, the latter two from New York

The travelogue the party and it likewise includes of society is a never ending tale. Mrs. Winston Hagen and Miss Miss Eliot Wadsworth joins the Abbie Vaillant, the latter two from outward pilgrimage, and after a New York brief stay in New York at the Barclay departs for Aiken, where hard riding to hounds necessitates a wardrobe completely stocked with the proper riding togs.

THE SWANSONG OF THE debutante having been definitely impressed on the winter's theme, Miss Post Debutante steps into the limelight held by the buds, for a final fling in fancy dress at the last of the Junior Supper Dances. This evening at the Hotel Copley-Plaza, with Mrs. Philip Dalton directing it, puts a gay period to a season that has been overwhelmingly a dancing one. Mrs Frederick Bundy, the former Miss Anita Hollister, entertains a supper party of eight; Miss Lucy Codman is a hostess; Mrs LeBaron Colt entertains as a young matron in the same scene in which she shone as Miss Josephine Jewett. Junior Lesguer and Vincent Club-ite.

EN PASSANT, ONE HEARS ON every side more than a little approval for the Vincent Club's businesslike procedure toward the goal of a week's stage production It was a move at once effective and spectacular to put the "chorus" into working uniforms of black and white of a pertness almost Ziegfeldian. Miss Nancy Adams, in her regalia of black satin and creamy white silk, is for being an excellent Vincent Club personality might well retain these uniforms as simple but so becoming—for a number in the show that is slated for presentation April 2 at the Plymouth.

THE BIG CITY IS THE MECCA for several of the social set—they pass through the metropolis en route to other American places. Mrs. William Stuart Forbes and Miss Barbara Forbes have been at the Madison, which also had Mrs. Arthur E. Sass of Dover as a guest. EXPECT YOUNG TO TAKE POST

A Hoover honor for New England, second only to the appointment of Charles Francis Adams to the cabinet, became known today with announcement that Benjamin Loring Young, of Weston, had been offered by the President, the post of first assistant Attorney-General of the United States.

Friends of Young, former speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, said they were convinced he would accept the offer.

The position would give New England another prominent place in official circles at Washington.

Offer of the post was made at a time when the former speaker was attending the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Margaret Young Emmons, 3 Fairfield st., who died early in the week. Because of the bereavement Young refused to discuss the situation beyond admitting that the offer had been received.

WIFE OF WAR VET MADE RICH BY RUM ASSAILS DRY LAW

Absorbingly interesting human documents from contestants and observers of the Hearst $25,000 temperance contest in all parts of North America, continue to flood the headquarters of the competition, at 220 South st., New York

The mental picture of what prohibition as a whole has meant to one sector of society, is illustrated strikingly by a letter on Mrs. Kathryn M. Wagner, of No. 6136 Greenwood ave., Chicago, who encloses the written testimony of a confidante in Detroit, and says:

"Reading of your temperance contest offer and being keenly interested in the question, I enclose a letter received from a French lady, for whom I did a slight favor in the course of the World War. She is a cultivated girl and married a young and ambitious French-Canadian officer who lost an arm in battle.

LETTER GIVEN

"After the war he went to Detroit as a salesman and later sent for his wife, but I shall let her tell her own story. I think the $25,000 offered as the best way to bring about a correction of the evils of prohibition, and it does not require any great prophetic vision to foresee certain calamity for the United States unless an end is made of the besmirching of national honor by hypocritical enforcement officers.

"I wish there were many more newspapers with the wisdom and courage of yours to publish more facts concerning this pressing question."

Such excerpts from the Detroit letter to Mrs. Wagner as may be published follow:

"My husband went into business here with an American with whom he had fought in France, and who had lost an eye and had also been gassed. Other business enterprises having failed, they then took to selling Canadian liquor.

"The business grew largely and thrived. My husband was at first afraid of the enterprises, but when I saw rich, intelligent Americans spending so much money for liquor, I, a Frenchwoman, said to him that, if these Americans wanted their wines, beers and liquors, they would in any event get them from somewhere and somebody.

CALLS IT TRAGEDY

"The two men paid plenty for protection, and they were never bothered. When the coast was clear they were told of it. Your American prohibition laws may be all right for bootleggers and prohibition enforcement officers, but your liberty-loving citizens declare it to be an absolute farce—and no funny French farce, either. It is a tragedy.

"In this region many a farmer that I know voted dry—for reasons of his own—but he had a still on his farm, with barrels of wine in his cellar, and barrels of potent hard cider for neighborhood customers. Of course this kind of farmer pays your so-called enforcement men, too.

"The customs records of Canada indicate that $25,000,000 worth of whiskey was cleared officially from the Dominion last year. I cannot see how the prohibition laws are ever going to be enforced.

"It is against both nature and the Scriptures, for so long as the land grows corn and fruit there will be the prohibited beverages.

"The conduct of some of these enforcement officers is nothing short of legalized crime, and both their corruption and the law they help flaunt are demoralizing youth.

"It is making a detestable institution of graft, repulsive to all decent people. If you have read of the recent revelations of widespread corruption in Detroit, I can tell you that it is even worse than it appeared.

"My husband's partner and friend died last October as the result of being gassed in the war. He asked us to quit. We have done so. We are rich now, and are going back to France.

"Our partner, before dying, wrapped himself in the American flag. His last words were: 'I am dying for you, Old Flag, willingly, but there are many cowards trying to stifle the freedom of conscience for which you stand.'

"We buried him in his flag and its folds over his grave. The Eighteenth Amendment was kind to him in life, but in death he despised it. If legally we acted wrongly by engaging in that business, kind friend, forgive us and remember all the conditions.

"Good-bye, Marie."

CRIME WAVE

An excellent statement follows: Adela Rogers St. John, novelist and short story writer, Los Angeles—The prohibition issue is the most important this country has faced since the Civil War. The William Randolph Hearst $25,000 temperance contest should prove a means of arousing national thought to the problem of getting temperance

Because of the tragedies I have seen result from drink, I was and am, in principle, a 'dry.' But during the last 10 years I have been slowly and reluctantly convinced, that prohibition under the Volstead act has intensified, and not solved, the liquor problem.

The Volstead act has not only failed to stop drinking; it has led us into a condition which is far more serious. The question is no longer of drink or no drink.

We are facing in this country a crime wave which differs from every other crime wave in history in its nature and menace. As a daughter of a criminal lawyer, the criminal or underworld forces of the days before prohibition were not unknown to me. The great factors then stood out clearly; crime at its best did not pay, and the criminal, above all things, respected and feared the federal law and its officials. These two things kept crime in check and unorganized—a sporadic growth which could be dealt with.

Bootlegging has made crime pay. Pay enormously. It has given the underworld huge sums of money with which to organize. It has necessarily recruited a brainier type of criminal. And bootleg money finances other branches of criminal activity.

Mr. Hearst, having seen the grave danger to the country, has taken a great step in his plan to arouse every citizen to think carefully and honestly on this issue—the most important before us today.

King a Sport! Why, He'll Bet All of $4!

Chantilly, France, March 15 (AP)—King Christian of Denmark, it turned out, was a poor picker of the races. During his sojourn on the Riviera he visited the track just one day and played every one of the six races, betting "the limit," as he explained.

Sympathizing friends learned that his limit was $4.

CANAL SURVEY IN NICARAGUA DEVELOPS

Washington, March 15—Maj.-Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, has begun organization of the field force to survey a route for an interoceanic canal across Nicaragua.

He expects to announce the personnel and arrange for the necessary transportation and supplies within the next few days.

Gen. Jadwin was out of the city when the bill authorizing the survey was enacted by Congress. On his return, he began work on the preliminary plans. He consulted with his assistants as to the number of men necessary, the nature of supplies and time required to complete the task.

He will select engineers who have had experience in Panama and who are accustomed to life in the tropics. He has not definitely decided upon the number of officers, but it will be sufficient to complete the task as quickly as possible so that any recommendations decided upon may be promptly submitted to Congress.

The enlisted personnel will be comparatively small, as natives will be employed for the work which they would do ordinarily. However, the party will have to be large, as they must arrange housing and necessary food supplies for several months in what is now a tropical jungle.

STUDY RULES, IS ADVICE GIVEN IN QUEST

Each person wishing to nominate a girl in the splendid Quest of the Typical American Girl should read the rules carefully. This suggestion is made today because of the numerous letters received which ask for information.

The Quest Editor is still being deluged with letters, evidences of the great interest in this magnificent effort to find the typical American girl.

The same interest is shown everywhere in the country, for the Quest has quickly taken hold of public attention.

Many are entering the names of girl relatives or friends. Many girls also, who desire to enroll are writing, asking for information.

ANOTHER NOMINATES

When preparing the nomination of a girl for the title of the "Typical American Girl" and the award of $5,000, read the rules of the contest thoroughly before sending in the nomination. It will make things easier for the Quest Editor and the judges, and better for your candidate.

Remember that a candidate must be proposed by another person, or by some club, sorority, society, or organization, but not by herself.

This Quest is a sincere effort on the part of Smart Set Magazine to find the American girl who best represents certain standards determined as those typical of the most popular girl in the world — the American miss.

QUESTS OF MAGAZINE

There are 17 newspapers throughout the country co-operating in this quest. Each will select from the nominations a regional candidate who will be sent to New York with all expenses paid. From the 17 girls, so chosen, the "Typical American Girl" will be selected.

During the visit to New York, which will be for a week, the girls will be guests of the Smart Set Magazine. Of course, both on the trip to the city, and during the entire affair each girl will be properly chaperoned.

BRITAIN ACTS TO BREAK THE U. S. TALKIE 'GRIP'

London, March 15 (AP)—English cinema circles have become perturbed at what is described as an American attempt to procure a monopoly of talking movies in Great Britain.

Representatives of the Federation of British Industries have conferred with British cinema men to consider the situation. It was stated that theaters which install American apparatus are not allowed to show British talkies while the owners of American talkies will not allow them to be shown with British apparatus.

The federation promised to comply with the request of the cinema men to ask all manufacturers and producers of talkies to agree to remove restrictions and establish a free market.

FLAT busts are unfashionable and unattractive . . . Cup-form brassiere is the secret which gives the smart, rounded bustlines. How subtly do these soft, silken, inner cups mould such enticing curves! How comfortably they support and lift a drooping, over-developed bust! How gracefully they add charm to an under-developed bust.

SNOOK LOSES IN PEN SPY FIGHT

Washington, March 15 (INS)—The resignation of John Snook of Ohio as warden of the Atlanta federal penitentiary will be accepted, it was indicated today at the Department of Justice.

The intervention of Senator Borah on behalf of Snook apparently failed to compromise the feud between Snook and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General, over the use of "undercover" agents as spies in Atlanta prison. The department, it was said, will back up Mrs. Willebrandt in the controversy, which means that Snook's "proffered resignation" will be accepted.

A representative of the department said today the use of "undercover" agents in federal penitentiaries was a "departmental policy." The Atlanta spy was discovered by Gaston B. Means, former Government detective, serving a term in prison.

NEW SERVICE BEATS FOG

New York, March 15—"A successful stunt was made of the new tender service which enabled passengers on the Robert E. Lee to arrive in New York city in time to keep their appointments despite the heavy fog which tied up harbor traffic yesterday morning," said Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnell, president of the Eastern Steamship Lines.

"We have long realized the value of a tender service to meet just such emergencies as occurred yesterday. It is our obligation to our passengers who enjoy the comforts of overnight travel from Boston to New York by steamer to get them here in time to keep their 9 o'clock appointments.

"Passengers were brought from ship to shore in five minutes, placed in motor coaches and conveyed to the Flushing Rapid Transit station and from Flushing direct to Times sq."

The new Diesel-motor driven tender which will further facilitate service is near completion. It will be christened by Mrs. F. C. Dunaine, Jr., the wife of one of the directors of the company, in whose honor it is to be named the "Margaret."

Radio Therapy Cure Denied by Doctors

London, March 15 (AP)—An official report of a committee of the British Medical Research Council denying possible benefits in artificial light treatment gave rise today to considerable discussion in English medical circles.

The council's criticism of radio therapy attracted all the more attention because of recent application of the treatment to King George. However, this use was not referred to in the report.

Today's Flagism

rough-and-ready American, and an outstanding figure from among the list of American presidents, was born on March 15, 1767. Known as "Old Hickory," his term in office proved him to be one of the most colorful characters of the rugged era in which he lived. On this date in 1781, the battle of Guilford Courthouse, N. C., was fought, with the American flag, as usual, victorious.

DENIES BRITAIN IN NAVY RACE WITH U. S.

London, March 15—That Great Britain is friendly toward the United States, is not engaged in a rivalry to beat that nation in a race in naval armaments and is in no danger of war with America, were points made by W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, in presenting the British naval policy before the House of Commons.

"There isn't the slightest reason to imagine them fighting against each other," he said.

Bridgeman revealed that England will lay down three new cruisers in 1929, and said that if she continues replacing obsolete cruisers at the rate of three annually, by 1940, England will have only 5 cruisers under 20 years of age.

Bridgeman, who announced that he was retiring from office at the end of the present session and would not seek re-election to Parliament, made, in what may be his last important speech, a strikingly frank and complete exposition of Britain's attitude on naval matters.

SEGRAVE IS BIG HERO TO PRINCE

London, March 14 (AP)—The Prince of Wales has the highest praise for the feat of Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, British record driver, in setting a new world speed record at Daytona, Fla. At a dinner of the Institute of Transport he said that he "would like to describe Segrave as a hero." He continued:

"I had a look at the Golden Arrow a few days before Maj. Segrave sailed for America and I had a chat with him.

"I think, without exaggeration, we can put his efforts to regain the world's speed record as one of the bravest, one of the most sporting ever made.

"It wasn't as though he did not know what the game was. He did and he left this country with a car which had never been tried out. It couldn't be—there is no room here to go at 200 miles an hour.

"I am sure that all of us take our hats off to Maj. Segrave as a very brave man and a very fine sportsman.

"We can only sympathize with him that the only thing that marred this wonderful success, this great triumph, was that his opponent from our friends over the other side, his American opponent, was killed."

Havana, March 15 (AP)—Fires in Cuba's sugar cane fields appeared today likely to cause a considerable reduction in the islands' cane harvest this year.

THE memorial service held for Corp. Dalzell Streator drew to the white old church high up on the hill numbers it had never held before.

As the weeks passed Streator suffered tortures from an uneasy conscience. He threw himself on Shirley's mercy. She seemed so unforgiving a clamp, so that Miss Fenn gave a low cry, but instead of releasing her, with one powerful tug he brought the woman to her feet. She forgot the bruising fingers that held her in alarm inspired by the face

Please Turn to Page 25, Column 1.

Streator met Carlotta Fenn, and her while she sat on the beach, a parasol in her hand.

Their conversation turned to religion, on spiritualism, and unconsciously her parasol ferrule traced a word in the sand—that was Dalzell.

He read it plainly and his hand closed on her wrist like a clamp, so that Miss Fenn

"Dal suffered," the girl inexorably reminded. "How much did that mean to you?"

Streator's head dropped with the burden of his despair. "You can't forgive?"

"I can't . . ." Shirley drew a breath like a sob. "I can't forget."

"You are hard," he remonstrated in a broken mutter.

The war was Shirley's salvation, she almost welcomed the declaration of the sixth of April, 1917, that war was a state already existing between the nation and the German Empire.

She enlisted in a women's auxiliary motor corps that was recruited in New York. She had a cool head, a sure eye, no nerves worth mentioning, no end of courage, had for years been accustomed to drive the Hawthorne motor car.

She came home to find her parents in need of her. While either lived, Shirley must remain, held under the lock and key of duty in this prison town whose every turning, reminded her of Dal. . . .

On the anniversary of Armistice Day a memorial service was celebrated before the Honor Roll of the youths of Gosport who had died in the fight overseas.

Though he had not served with the American Expeditionary Forces, Dal's name led all the rest.

Gallantry Pays; Two Shy of It Land in Cells

Lack of gallantry toward damsels in distress landed Joseph M Stock of Forest Hills and Arthur W. Holman of Marlboro in police cells in Watertown early today—and their troubles aren't over yet.

As an automobile owned by Holman and driven by Stock reached Watertown sq., it was hailed by Sergt. Thomas Devaney. All the fatherly officer wanted was to get a life for two woe-begone girls who had missed the last electric car to their Waltham home.

Instead of stopping, Stock stepped on the gas. Sergt. Devaney commandeered a second car and gave chase. After a five-mile chase, punctuated by revolver shots, fired into the air, the fugitives were halted at pistol point.

Stock was arrested on charges of drunkenness, drunken driving and refusing to obey a policeman's signal. Holman was held as drunk.

And the girls may have walked to Waltham, for all the authorities know.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN New York Curb MARKET

RADIO, STEEL, ANACONDA ALL AT NEW TOPS

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, March 15—The stage was set for a strong bullish "demonstration" in the stock market this morning.

Opening prices of a dozen or more of the speculative favorites showed gains of 1 to 4 points from Thursday's brilliant close, with blocks of stock all the way from 500 to 35,000 shares "coming over."

The bulls were jubilant as prices of three favorite stocks soared skyward.

A $20,000,000 decrease in the total of brokers' loans, announced in the Reserve Board's report; booming trade and industrial conditions in many sections of the country; the addition of the New York and Reserve Bank heads to raise the rediscount rates; bulging exchange payments to Uncle Sam and easier money market conditions in a week of normally high rates, furnished the lifting power behind the new advances in stock prices today.

Radio, U. S. Steel, Anaconda and others sold at new highs on the move.

General Motors shared the limelight with Radio as a stellar attraction in the big speculative show. On top of yesterday's sharp rise, Big Motors jumped another 4 points to 90 at the start of today's session, on sale of 35,000 shares, on reports that the officials had put over an important deal in Germany, acquiring the biggest motor car manufacturing plant in that country.

As required 30,000 shares of Radio stock to fill the overnight requirements of New York and outside traders. The stock opened at 102 and sold above 103, after which profit-taking flooded the market and the reaction carried the price down 2 points.

Stock sales in the first half hour alone aggregated 1,221,000 shares.

Prices Are Steady on New York Curb

New York, March 15 (INS)—Curb prices were steady today. Consolidated Film advanced ¼ to 23¾; Newmont Mining was up 1⅛ at 22⅞, Gold Seal Electric up 1⅛ at 7⅝, and Checker Cab up ⅛ at 87⅛; Westvaco Chlorine lost ⅝ at 112¾.

Copper Exporters, Inc., advanced copper abroad to 20¾ cents, c. i. f., Hamburg, Havre and London, from 20¾ cents, up ⅛ cents.

This brings the price in Europe into line with the domestic price of copper, which is 20¾ cents for sales at that price late Thursday.

Outside of a few higher prices for copper Saturday or early next week depending on whether or not anaconda and the abroad continue to demand copper irrespective of price.

CHAIN STORES IN MERGER

First National Stores, Inc., is about to effect another substantial consolidation of chain store groceries. Papers are being drawn up and announcement may be expected in a few days.

First National Stores will not lose its identity. The pending acquisition will give the company a gross volume of sales of close to $100,000,000 per annum.

Int. Telephone in Plan for Splitup

A special meeting of stockholders of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. has been called for May 8, at Baltimore, to vote on proposal to split the stock on a three-for-one basis. Each present $100 par share will be exchanged for three of $33⅓ par each. Stockholders will also vote on proposal to increase authorized stock to 15,000,000 shares of no par from 2,500,000 shares, $100 par.

Directors have voted that, as soon as reapportionment has been taken by stockholders for creation of no-par stock, additional shares will be offered for subscription by stockholders in amount on temporary and equitable terms determined at the meeting. There are outstanding 1,569,433 shares, $100 par.

...ia Insurance Can Cut Its Par

Hartford, March 15 (AP)—The passage of a bill by the House and Senate permits the Rossia Insurance Company of America to reduce the par value of its stock from $25 to $10, and to increase its capital up to $10,000,000, it became known today.

The bill amended its charter and was passed under suspension of the rules because there was "certain urgency" for such action. After the signing of the bill by Governor John H. Trumbull the vote of the stockholders will next be sought

Radio Bull Pool is the Largest Ever Formed

New York, March 15—The bull pool in the new stock of the Radio Corp of America is the largest ever formed. It is a 1,000,000 share pool and was far over-subscribed. The pool was formed with the belief that Radio this year would show a big expansion in business as well as in earnings.

West More Interested in Live Stock Than in Shares

By B. C. FORBES

In the Middle West, March 15—I find here, where the people talk "cattle" about as much as they talk "stocks," that they don't mean the Wall Street variety they mean live stock. How cattle and pigs and hogs are much more important than quotations for all loans and stocks covering the receipts of farm animals and of wheat at the leading centers are far more interesting to them than figures covering bank clearings, stock exchange payments or Uncle Sam and easier money market conditions in a week of normally high rates, furnished the lifting power behind the new advances in stock prices today.

Radio, U. S. Steel, Anaconda and others sold at new highs on the move.

General Motors shared the limelight with Radio as a stellar attraction in the big speculative show. On top of yesterday's sharp rise, Big Motors jumped another 4 points to 90 at the start of today's session, on sale of 35,000 shares, on reports that the officials had put over an important deal in Germany, acquiring the biggest motor car manufacturing plant in that country.

As required 30,000 shares of Radio stock to fill the overnight requirements of New York and outside traders. The stock opened at 102 and sold above 103, after which profit-taking flooded the market and the reaction carried the price down 2 points.

Stock sales in the first half hour alone aggregated 1,221,000 shares.

Tariffs versus free trade are of no academic interest. What the tillers of the soil want to know is all that they want to know, is whether Congress will not get busy and raise the duties upon which are being freely scaled by foreigners producing agricultural products, thus taking money out of the pockets and bread out of the mouths of the Lonest citizens who form the backbone of this nation. The farmers, be assured have no inferiority complex, no overmodest concept of their own importance in the scheme of things.

One needs to get away from New York, away from the purring of the stock ticker, in order to get a truer grip on the realities, in order to get his perspective corrected.

Here's a stock statement which sheds interesting light. Ten years ago there was practically one head of cattle in this country for every two persons. To-day there is less than one head of cattle for every two Americans.

While Wall Street stocks have been increasing by the billion, the kind of stock that furnishes our food has been steadily decreasing. Look at the figures of cattle to human population in this country over a period of years:

	Cattle	Population
1930, est.	60,000,000	120,000,000
1910, est.	72,000,000	92,000,000
1920, est.	68,000,000	106,000,000
1925, est.	61,000,000	115,000,000
1927, est.	58,000,000	118,000,000
1926, est.	57,000,000	117,000,000

The official number of cattle in the United States on January 1, 1927, was 57,521,000, against 58,731,000 at the beginning of this year. These figures explain why beef now costs more.

* * *

It may astonish you to learn that, notwithstanding all our progress and prosperity, we now have fewer beef cattle than we did at the opening of the century. Here are the figures, in pounds:

	Beef Cattle	Lamb, Pork, Veal	Total
1927	478	315	793
1900	467	312	779

We have more than doubled our consumption of veal, because farmers have found it more profitable to market fat cows instead of raising them and getting only an unsatisfactory price for inferior calves. And, besides, veal, like calf's liver, has become popular with those who can afford to pay for it. Lamb's consumption has increased because we use more pastry.

For the time Montana as a great cattle State, don't you, and Oklahoma, too; and the Dakotas, Nebraska and Michigan and Wyoming and New Mexico?

Well, let me tell you something. Not one of these States can boast of as many cattle as New York has.

Only nine States have more cattle—the four-footed species—than New York. They are, in order here given, Texas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Missouri, Illinois and California.

Not only so, but only two States, Wisconsin and Minnesota, have as many dairy cows as New York. Only we need a lot of water, even though their product doesn't. Maybe New York might make a profitable business because of its notorious reputation for being adept at "watering stock."

Tomorrow I hope to tell about the revolution going on in the agricultural sections of Texas.

Views of Wall Street

Underwood-Elliott-Fisher CONSIDERABLE favorable comment is heard concerning prospects of Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, which has been somewhat overshadowed in its ambitious program for making the company virtually independent of all outside enterprises in its field.

The absorption of various companies into the Underwood-Elliott-Fisher fold has permitted substantial economies of operation, it is understood, and the company's earnings will probably disclose this tendency more noticeably in coming years.

Last year resulted in a net over $8 a share, but current business is believed to be running materially above 1928, as indications are profits the current year will show encouraging increases. The company maintains an extremely strong current cash position, its working capital at the end of 1928 exceeding $15,000,000, current liabilities having been lowered to below $2,000,000.

Burroughs Readjustment

Burroughs Adding Machine is understood to be completing its survey' sizeable stock dividend along with a possible adjustment of its manufacturing facilities.

Union Carbide Plans

Proposed enlarge of Union Carbon & Carbide's capitalization incident to three-for-one exchange of its stock is believed to be only the initial step in a more extensive program which will allow stock holders a greater share in the company's prosperity. Whatever dividend is declared on the new shares when the split becomes effective is likely that the payment before long will be such as to exceed the current $6 rate on the present shares.

Carbide has had a long period of expansion and has increased its net doubling its net income in the last five years its outlook is such that stockholders may well look forward to substantially increased returns.

Kennecott's Position

It was reported the Newmount Mining Corporation, a close ally in enterprise for many years of Colonel W. S. Thompson's shares, has disposed of 100,000 shares of Kennecott stock which it had a tremendous profit the action of Kenn ...tt in recent months would indicate that a favorable selling had taken place, but its friends derived great satisfaction from the firm manner in which the stock met such selling. A banker who is thoroughly acquainted with Kennecott affairs declared to the writer that the company has now 150,000,000 at present in cash and liquid securities.

Equipment Companies

There has been noticeable improvement of sentiment toward the railway equipment companies. While not everybody agrees that the corner after the long period of depression it has suffered in recent months, the trade figures show considerable increase in demand for equipment.

The Pullman manufacturing subsidiary is said to be enjoying a most substantial business, while Baldwin Locomotive and American Car & Foundry are also understood to be receiving new orders in encouraging volume. The motor of much importance to several of the American companies is the tremendous increase in business of their Canadian subsidiaries.

ADVERTISING LIFTS SALES OF AM. TOBACCO

New York, March 15—American Tobacco Company makes public its earnings for 1928, setting a new high mark in sales and profits.

Record net earnings of $25,066,299, an increase of $1,756,610 over 1927, were largely the result of the great increase in the sales of Lucky Strike Cigarettes, coincident with the most extensive newspaper advertising campaign ever undertaken in behalf of an American product.

The cut in cigarette prices in the spring of 1928 would have reduced earnings by millions of dollars if sales had not been largely increased. But public appreciation of the improvement in the process of manufacture by the application of heat known as "Toasting" so increased sales that all of this loss and more was made up.

George W Hill president of the American Tobacco Company, states that the great gains in the sales of Lucky Strike Cigarettes, which were made in each of the months of 1928 are continuing in the first months of 1929

Net profits for the year on American Tobacco common stock were $11.19 per share, as compared with $10.28 in 1927. After the payment of dividends of $6 per share on the preferred stock and $8 per share on the common stock of the company's 30,000 stockholders, there was carried to surplus $6,229,278, bringing the surplus up to $46,850,221.

The company's balance sheet shows a very strong position. In addition the enlarged demand for Lucky Strike Cigarettes, plant investment was increased by $1,982,256 to $13,443,116; and tobacco manufactured stock and supplies to $59,385,592, an increase of $3,564,962 Cash on hand was increased by $2,273,93: to $17,033,698.

NEWS OF BOSTON MARKETS

STOCK'S RISE INDICATED BY BOND MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Wall Street writer declares the bond market rather than the stock market reflects the opinion of experienced investors. He says bond buyers as a class have "had longer experience, shown more conservatism, and acquired more knowledge of fundamentals governing the trend of security prices." He insists people are asking today whether the market will be checked by the existing high credit rates, and that the bond market is saying plainly it doesn't expect an early tightness of stock market conditions making for high money. In plain English, people are not buying bonds and that is because they think stocks offer better opportunities for profit.

After several years of a bull market in which common stocks have held the center of the stage, it is a question whether the rank and file of those "in" Wall and State Streets can properly be referred to as bond buyers, or even ex-buyers of bonds. Certainly the market leaders, even those who belong to the "old school" of a number of years ago, would not be apt to consider themselves bond buyers. It looks as if the day had passed when a young man could step out of college athletics and make a fortune selling bonds without effort.

Benj. M. Anderson, Jr.

The bond salesman of today has to work quite as hard to make a success of his calling as the college athlete trying to "make" the football or baseball team.

Boston men will be prominent at the 45th annual dinner of the Economic Club of New York next Monday, when the members gather in Hotel Astor. "The Federal Reserve System and the Control of Credit" will be the timely topic, one on which Governor W. P. G. Harding of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston is eminently fitted to talk! Governor Harding will discuss the subject for benefit of the members Dr. Benjamin M. Anderson, jr., former Harvard instructor, now economist of the Chase National Bank of New York, will also give his views on the subject.

New England Council's study looking toward stabilizing employment has yielded gratifying results, as noted in yesterday's Boston Evening American. Maintaining intact a skilled personnel is a very desirable objective, as leading New England industrials can testify. The Providences and Portsmouth, N. H., navy yards have a similar need. Those in direction of their destinies could investigate the New England Council's studies.

Great deal has been printed about "the smallest February building in six years." When the authorities began to advance the money rates to "check speculation" it was pointed out in this column that advances tended to impede natural progress of this great "key industry." Despite the losses suffered elsewhere, New England was able to show a gain. The Bradstreet's figures give us the New England February total of permitted-for

New England was the only section to record an increase in building permits in February.

Wall Street writer says: "That the 'gentler sex' is assuming an ever more important place in Wall Street and brokerage circles may be gathered from the fact that, with admission to several partnership last month of Carol H. Smith in the New York Stock Exchange firm of Cassatt & Co., there are now 21 women holding full or special partnerships in Stock Exchange firms. The other women partners are as follows: Lilian A. Bierce, of Harris & Voss; Kate W. Burras, of H. K. Burras & Co.; Emily L. Carleton, of Carleton & Mott; Charlotte B. Drysdale, of Drysdale & Co.; Dora Flournoy Elliott, of Gilbert Elliott & Co.; Margaret J. Goodbody, of Goodbody & Co.; Amy C. Greenebaum, of Fred H. Greenebaum & Co.; Cora N. Wilmerding, of Gray & Wilmerding. Of these, five are general partners in their firms and the remainder special partners."

The same writer says: "After virtually turning down the offer of the New Haven presidency twice, John J. Pelley finally accepted and New England is the gainer. Incidentally, I understand that George Hannauer of the Boston & Maine had some influence in his decision to come.

"Hannauer and Pelley are old friends and when the head of the Boston & Maine learned that Mr. Pelley was somewhat reluctant to sever his connection with the Central of Georgia and enter a completely new field, he got on the long distance telephone and had a talk with him. Mr. Pelley would have stood in line eventually for the presidency of the Illinois Central, for it has been customary for the presidents of that road to serve an apprenticeship as head of the subsidiary Central of Georgia. He had made an excellent record with the Central of Georgia and it is assumed that the New Haven offer must have been very attractive to induce him to change.

"Mr. Pelley is still a comparatively young man, only about 51 years old. He entered upon a railroad career more by accident perhaps than by design. He took a temporary job as a station clerk to earn some money for the purpose of pursuing further his education. He went to the University of Illinois and did special work. But his father died when young Pelley was 20 years old and he then had to go to work and stay at it. His first regular railroad job brought him the magnificent remuneration of $45 a month.

"With characteristic modesty, Mr. Pelley attributes his rise in the railroad profession more to luck than to any extraordinary ability, although he admitted recently that there was something in 'sticking to the job' with determination."

Charles E. Hatfield has been elected treasurer of Monadnock Mills of Claremont, N. H., succeeding George A. Tenney, resigned.

They might call this the "Mellon bull market."

U. S. Steel Corporation

World's Largest Manufacturer of Steel Earned Net Income of $107,827,000 In 1928

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Further advance of U. S. Steel in yesterday's New York Stock Exchange trading was in line with general expectations.

The United States Steel Corp. is the world's largest manufacturer of steel with ingot capacity of over 23,000,000 tons annually.

The corporation controls output from the raw material to rolled and finished goods.

It also owns and controls extensive railroad properties as well as floating equipment, together with coal and iron mines.

For the year of 1928 the corporation reported a net income of $107,827,000, excluding $6,172,000 as special income.

This was equivalent to around $31 a share on its preferred issue and about $12.50 a share on the common stock.

U. S. Steel is reported operating at about 96 per cent of capacity with indications that a new high record for March will be established.

The directors recently approved a plan to increase authorized common stock to 12,500,000 shares from the present authorized issue of 7,533,210. Stockholders will act on the plan at the annual meeting to be held April 15, 1929.

The object of the proposal is to provide funds for the retirement of the corporation's second mortgage bond issues, the 5's of 1951 outstanding at nearly $135,000,000, and the 5's of 1963 at about $138,500,000.

Interest and sinking fund requirements on the two bond issues represent total annual charges of about $29,000,000, or the equivalent of about $3.90 a share on the present outstanding stock.

Although the ratio for subscription, price terms, etc., is to be fixed at a later date, an offer of one share for each five held at $150 would result in the sale of approximately 1,500,000 shares, and the balance for retiring bonds could probably be safely drawn from current assets.

Details of the subscription offer are still veiled

Unless further disturbances arise as a result of measures to influence the supply of money for general business and the stock market, the favorable outlook should be reflected both in 1929 earnings and in higher prices for the shares.

Blue Star Fleet to Burn Pulverized Coal

Great Britain's Blue Star Line is reported planning to equip its entire fleet with a pulverized fuel system, according to the Department of Commerce.

Satisfactory experiments with pulverized fuel in the Blue Star liner Stuartstar, at present on a voyage to South America, which has been partially equipped to burn pulverized fuel and on her return to Great Britain will be fitted to burn this type of fuel exclusively, is said to have brought about this decision of the company, reports Trade Commissioner Homer S. Fox, London.

It is understood the Blue Star fleet includes 26 vessels ranging from 1350 gross tons to 12,848 gross tons each, so that the conversion of this fleet to the use of pulverized fuel marks an important step in this type of fuel utilization for marine purposes.

It was also recently announced that a 9000 tons merchant ship had been placed on order in a British shipyard to burn pulverized fuel by the Brand system. Interest in the utilization of pulverized fuel continues active in Great Britain, and particularly in connection with the utilization of the residual fuel from low temperature carbonization processes.

GENERAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS

From the Monthly Bank Letter of March Issued by The National City Bank of New York

FEBRUARY brought a continuation of the high rate of activity in the basic industries and the volume of manufacturing and trade to date has been favorable, according to the monthly review of economic conditions prepared by The National City Bank of New York. With no indication of any easing of in the money rate, the review finds signs that general business has been hurt by the high rate, are lacking.

Annual reports to stockholders thus far show that aggregate net profits of American corporations last year exceeded by 14 per cent those of the previous year, a rate again indicated by quarterly and semi-annual statements made during the year. Examination of particular groups of industries shows that general prosperity of recent years has not been shared equally by all lines nor even by all companies in the same line.

"Increases, however, have offset the decreases so that the sum-total of earnings is higher," the review points out.

On the subject of the Bank of England rate increase, the review says:

"For the Wall Street speculator, the chief interest in the higher London rate probably lies in its effect in checking for the time being at least the flow of gold to the United States upon which many were counting to provide fuel for further credit expansion. So far as the Bank of England is concerned it would seem as though definite notice had been served that that institution does not propose to allow its reserves to be drawn further into the speculative vortex at New York.

"In general, it does not appear that the world has any large supplies of gold to spare to the United States, and if gold comes in it means for other countries a tearing down of the re-distribution that has been built up so carefully during recent years and upon which disorganized currencies have founded their returns to the gold standard. At the same time for the United States it means an accentuating a condition of over-expanded credit already reaching formidable proportions. During the past year we have expanded our credit by about 7 per cent while production and volume of goods, as near as may be estimated, has grown by about 3 or 4 per cent, a discrepancy which can only mean inflation.

"Thus, from the standpoint both of international and domestic credit an influx of gold into this country could have only unfortunate results. That it would relieve the strain in the money market to any appreciable degree seems unlikely in view of the present temper of the stock market. So long as the pace of speculation continues as now there is little reason to hope but that the securities market would quickly absorb any gold not applied by the member banks to the liquidation of their federal reserve borrowings, leaving the money market as tense as ever.

"That the federal reserve board's warning against the diversion of funds to speculation has not yet become on the same day as the advance in the Bank of England rate was doubtless a coincidence, which nevertheless lent emphasis to both. While the one served notice that England at least was unwilling to see her gold drawn into the Wall Street boom, the other set the reserve banks squarely opposed in any way, direct or indirect, in the speculative markets."

Regarding the outlook for money, the review says:

"The outstanding fact of the money situation is that the seasonal low point of liquidation is now past and we are facing the spring with its enlarged demands for manufacturing and trade on a level of rates already the highest in eight years. Right now should be the easy period of the year, and if we have not got easy money now there is little chance of our getting it unless through a collapse of security prices or a decline of business."

One of the Most Impressive Advertising Tributes Ever Accorded a Boston Newspaper!

"We feel confident that the American has been a vital factor in carrying the Kellogg message to the vast and responsive audience which has made your publication one of the leading newspapers"

PRESIDENT OF THE KELLOGG COMPANY

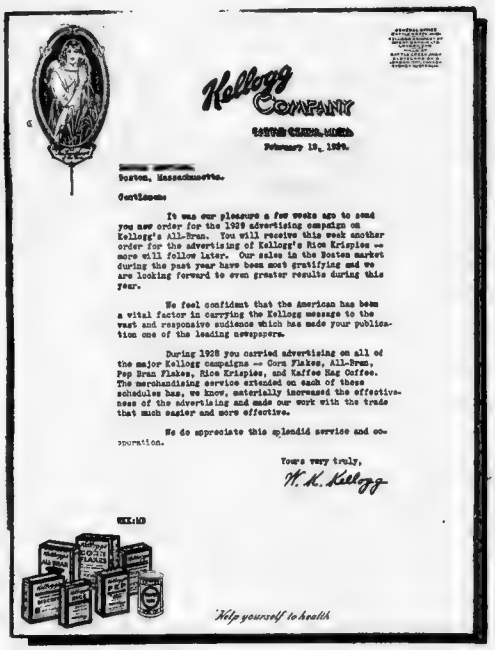
facts

Within Boston's official thirty-mile zone, the Boston Evening American has 83,303 more circulation than the second Boston evening newspaper, 92,209 more than the third Boston evening newspaper and 208,909 more than the fourth Boston evening newspaper.

Supplementing the activities of the Martha Lee School of Home Economics with consumers, there is a similarly thorough contact maintained by the Merchandising Department of the Boston Evening American with dealers.

A staff of seven to twelve men trained in field work, research work, distribution of display material and other services is available to national advertisers in this paper.

In addition, the Boston Evening American provides a news rack service to advertisers which cannot be secured from any other Boston paper. This gives an advertiser a poster display for one week on news racks placed at the most advantageous retail store locations throughout Greater Boston.



Kellogg Company

February 19, 1929.

Boston, Massachusetts.

Gentlemen:

It was our pleasure a few weeks ago to send you new order for the 1929 advertising campaign on Kellogg's All-Bran. You will receive this week another order for the advertising of Kellogg's Rice Krispies -- more will follow later. Our sales in the Boston market during the past year have been most gratifying and we are looking forward to even greater results during this year.

We feel confident that the American has been a vital factor in carrying the Kellogg message to the vast and responsive audience which has made your publication one of the leading newspapers.

During 1928 you carried advertising on all of the major Kellogg campaigns -- Corn Flakes, All-Bran, Pep Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, and Kaffee Hag Coffee. The merchandising service extended on each of these schedules has, we know, materially increased the effectiveness of the advertising and made our work with the trade that much easier and more effective.

We do appreciate this splendid service and co-operation.

Yours very truly,

W. K. Kellogg

WHEN KELLOGG compliments a newspaper, it is real praise—authoritative from start to finish. The Kellogg Company is one of the biggest advertisers in America. Through the excellence of their advertising, the keenness of their merchandising and the high quality of their manufacturing—they have become the largest manufacturers of ready-to-eat cereals in the world.

Kellogg is in a position to compare, to know the value of advertising and of media. Theirs is a great tribute to the pulling, paying power of a great newspaper. They back their judgment of this newspaper with their experience and their money.

Kellogg enjoys a tremendous sales acceptance among the people of New England. The original Kellogg's Corn Flakes, for example, outsells its nearest competitor by a ratio of more than four to one. It has practically 100% distribution.

The Boston Evening American carried a large share of the advertising for Kellogg's products in this territory for 1928, exceeding that of any other Boston newspaper. In 1929, Kellogg backs its experience and confidence in the Boston Evening American by again assigning to it the largest share of the schedule. As each new Kellogg product has been placed on the market the Boston Evening American has been called upon to do the bulk of the selling job—and has done it!

What's Back of the Boston Evening American's Food Selling Power?

Coverage first of all. The common sense way to reach the most people in this market, or any other market, is to advertise in the newspaper that most of them read at a time when most of them are at home.

The latest A. B. C. audit of the Boston Evening American showed 298,940 circulation. This is practically half (46%) of the total circulation of all Boston evening newspapers combined.

Coverage—dominant and strategically concentrated coverage—is back of the American's food-selling power. And back of this coverage is responsiveness.

The activities of the Boston Evening American-Martha Lee School of Home Economics set the stage for the introduction of each new or old food product to the homes of Boston and New England.

If you contemplate entering this rich market, let us provide you with a careful study of the opportunities that await you here.

Braves Go After 2nd Win Over Yankees

By NICK FLATLEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15—The Braves, pepped up by knocking off the cocky Yankees, go back after the American League champions again today.

The series is developing into quite a warm affair.

Both Miller Huggins and the Yank strategists are shuffling eyes around like cards. The Sox never miss a chance to slip in a pinch hitter or fielder where it may do some good, and while the players aren't going at top speed, the brains are working on all cylinders.

Nick Flatley

Managers always tell you that spring games do not count, then go out and break their heads to win 'em. A team that gets the winning habit is likely to keep it. The Yanks, of course, don't need it, but the Braves do. The desire to win, though, is not misleading Judge Fuchs into taking chances with his athletes.

He is keeping Lester Bell on the bench for a while because the third baseman has a slightly sore arm. And Heinie Mueller will not be unleashed until his sore ankle has recovered completely.

Eddie Farrell, whose bumped finger recovered with remarkable rapidity, will be spelled once of these days by little Fernie Janvrin, who is so good in practice that he may be put in there.

All of the pitchers are right, so the team's principal strength is on hill. Which reminds us that Huggins of the Yankees has been impressed greatly by the tribal pitching.

"That bunch of Brave pitchers cookies Miller, "looks better than any gang I've seen with the Boston club in several years. That goes even though they have been able to beat us down here regularly. Other pitchers were in real shape, and naturally looked good.

"This year they are not cutting loose with everything, but they put over the idea of being a smart and capable crew just the same. I have watched five of them work, and they all looked good. And I know that Bob Smith and Brandt and Greenfield can go with any ball club.

"A team with eight or nine average good pitchers can win a flock of ball games. And the Braves have at least that many. It's too early to say how that club will hit, but I think it's a cinch it will have fine pitching and a nifty defensive infield.

Good catching, too. Only a little more than that is needed to make any club a pennant contender."

HUGGINS KNOWS STUFF

Miller knows his baseball, as the impressive records of his teams prove. He does not collect all the glory of the Yanks, but he's the works, just the same.

He knows how to pick his players, and has a gang of rube who could team up and come close to fighting into the first division in any league.

HURLERS O. K.

Delaney, Seibold and Hearn worked well for Judge Fuchs. The first named kicked his way through four innings without ever being in real trouble.

He quelled Ruth and Gehrig with mere singles, and that's always good pitching. He had perfect control, and was as cool as an icicle. He looks ready for a real pitching year.

Seibold was the victim of the Yank revolution, but it wasn't his fault. Pitching for the first time against the best hitting club the game boasts, he was calm and efficient. He knows how. And Hearn finished up like a champ.

They could have been held to a single tally without much effort on the part of the hurlers.

Morris, Ruffing and Russell, all good twirlers, are almost ready today. If MacFayden, Gaston and Lisenbee round into form before the start of the season, the Sox will cause a whole lot of trouble in that American league race.

They don't figure to be one of the hardest hitting outfits in the circuit, but the acquisition of such players as Bigelow, Standaert, Reeves, Gillis and Scarritt has added a lot of punch and they won't need a great many hits to win, providing the pitching proves as good as it promises to be.

The Sox were the best team in the league in fielding last season. While some of this defensive strength is being sacrificed in an effort to add offensive strength this spring, the fielding is all that could be desired, to date.

ALMOST PERFECT BALL

The regulars have engaged in four games, thus far, and have made but three errors. And two of these were by the catcher.

Flagg and Regan have been great fielders since breaking in and still are. Reese at third is a finished performer. Rhyne, Nazlesky, Gillis and Gerber shortstop candidates, can all hold down the position in big league fashion.

Bigelow, who has been playing right field because of his hitting, isn't supposed to be much of a fielder but you can't prove it by anything he has yet shown. He has taken care of everything which has gone his way as if he knew how.

Rothrock, in center, is a great ball hawk. So is Scarritt in left. If room is made for Twiggy, which is likely, the team won't suffer defensively. He can go and get 'em as well as anyone in the business.

Two practice games and the same number of exhibition tilts don't make a season, but the Sox have shown enough up to now to warrant rating them fifty per cent stronger than last season and predicting that they will battle their way out of the diamond wilderness in which they have long been lost, during the coming campaign.

Sox Get Rest After Defeating Reds

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 15—The drubbing that the Red Sox handed Cincinnati saved them a lot of hard work.

Had they lost to the Reds they would be facing two lopsessions to put them in trim for the next exhibition contest with Indianapolis at Sarasota on Sunday.

They looked so good against the Clan of Hendricks, however, that Manager Carrigan has decided to go light on them until the start of next week.

A short workout, followed by a five-inning practice game is all that is on the docket for today and tomorrow.

The exhibition the boys put on against the Reds was the best made by any Fenway aggregation in the South for lo, these many seasons.

The pitching was great, the fielding faultless, and the hitting hard and timely. An unbeatable combination in this game of baseball.

Against the Cards, the fielding passed muster, but the hurling was bad in spots, and the hitting was streaky. We observed after that contest that the Sox ought to be pretty good this season whenever the hurling is up to the standard.

The subsequent game tended to affirm our contention. The boys hammered out 13 runs, which was most encouraging, but two or three would have been plenty, the way Morris, Ruffing and Russell were tossing 'em up.

The Reds scored four runs only because each of the trio let up a bit.

WIDE OPEN HOCKEY GO TOMORROW

Proposed Rule Changes Get Real Tryout in Bruins-Pittsburgh Game

Boston will see the most wide open hockey ever played in the National League when the Bruins and Pittsburgh Pirates meet at the Garden tomorrow night.

Prexy Frank Calder of the National League has given permission to have the game played under the proposed new rules, which permit offside passes in the attacking areas and which place no restriction upon kicking the puck.

The Bruins have been anxious for an opportunity to test the new rules, and with the Bruins in first place the opportunity is available tomorrow.

The Bruins have tried out the new rules in practice for the benefit of hockey writers and other critics, and the suggestions have been widely approved.

There is no question but that the rules will be changed during the summer, and before the Boston club votes on the matter it wants the reaction of the fans.

There will be no attempt to introduce all the new changes because that would instantly throw the players off their stride on the eve of the championship play.

The three changes to be made in the code used in tomorrow night's game are Offside will be permitted in the attacking zone, providing the players are inside of the puck carrier, going over the blue line.

Players will be permitted to kick the puck in any zone, except that an attacking player may not score by kicking the puck into the net.

Goalers shall not hold the puck more than three seconds. If they do, the penalty will be a faceoff ten feet out from the net with no player allowed between the goal and the players facing off.

The game tomorrow night will be The last of the regular 44 game schedule and will mark the final performance of the Bruins before the start of the National League Championship series with Les Canadiens which is to start on Tuesday at the Garden, a best three out of five series.

Segrave Now Seeks Motor Boat Record

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 15 (AP)—Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, who earlier this week set a new world automobile speed record of 231 miles an hour, today set out for added laurels. He expected to leave here this morning for Miami, where he will compete with Gar Wood for the title of "world motor boat king," in speed contests to be conducted in Biscayne bay.

The Wood record, established in has Miss America KK at more than 92 miles an hour, has never been exceeded. Maj. Segrave has built the Miss England, in which he hopes to beat Wood at Miami.

The body of Lee Hibbs, killed when he tried to break Segrave's record in J. M. White's Triplex, was sent to his old home in Tennessee for burial.

The body of Charles Traub camera man struck by the flying Triplex when it went out of control, was to be sent to his home in Indianapolis today.

Six of last year's seven championships are entered. The Grapplers of Lehigh and Penn State have been ranked as favorites, with Yale and Cornell figured to provide the strongest opposition.

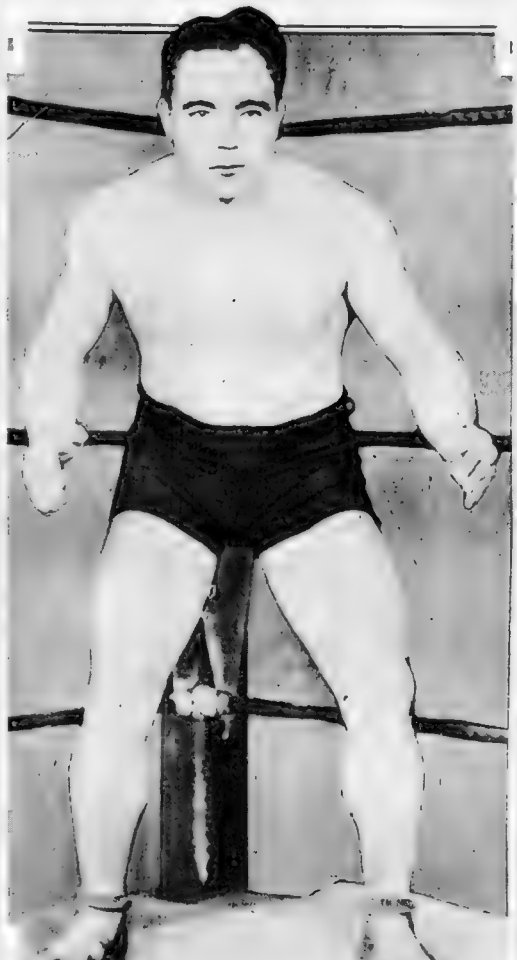
MAT KING DEFENDS CROWN IN HUB



GUS SONNENBERG

Gus, former All-America football star at Dartmouth, defends his heavyweight wrestling title in the Boston Garden, tonight when he meets Panther Joe Malcewicz. Sonny depends on his powerful and lightning fast flying tackle. Joe expects to block the tackle without difficulty. And defeat the champ.

BETTING IS EVEN ON TITLE GO TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY

GUS SONNENBERG will be fighting with his back against the wall when he clashes with Joe Malcewicz in a finish wrestling match, best two falls out of three, at the Boston Garden tonight under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Sonnenberg's title of ... champion will be at stake when he enters the ring against the Utica Panther.

Close followers of wrestling consider Malcewicz a more dangerous opponent for Sonnenberg than Lewis. The latter is a veteran and has passed the peak of his form. Malcewicz, on the other hand, is only 28 years of age, which is young for a wrestler. In addition he has a background of ten years of experience in the wrestling game.

Jack Conway

During the war, Malcewicz won the A. E. F. wrestling championship. Since then he has been displaying brilliant form on the mat. On one occasion he went to ... with strangler Lewis at Bra... Field after three hours of grappling.

The Panther has prepared himself carefully for tonight's contest. He has been working at Joe Tolendo's gym with five sturdy partners. He has had them trying flying tackles and other rough tactics. Joe's speed and science have enabled him to show brilliantly against his opponents.

SONNENBERG is confident he will dispose of Malcewicz like he has everybody else whom he has met on the mat. He looks upon the Garden affair as just another bout.

Sonny has carried this attitude from his football days at Dartmouth. In those days it did not make any difference to him whether the Big Green eleven was battling Harvard or one of the smaller colleges. He just went in there and did his best work.

Since winning the title from Lewis, Sonny has been the most active wrestler in the world. He has toured as far West as Chicago. He has taken on the ordinary run of opponents. In doing so he has made $50,000 in purses.

Tonight's bout is the most important for Sonny since he became champion. There are many of his admirers who tipped him to pass up Malcewicz for the time being, but he refused to do so. Gus is of the

BROWN SWIM TEAM IN HUB

Providence, R. I., March 15—Brown will send a full team of varsity swimmers in quest of the New England intercollegiate swimming title to the Hub University Club today and tomorrow, and indications point to the best prospects that the Bruin has had in years.

The Bruin holds victories over Wesleyan, Springfield, Boston University and M. I. T., as well as several strong teams not in the New England Intercollegiate Association, and Coach Barry is counting on the title.

The team of stalwarts upon whom the bid will depend have been going through their paces at the fastest clip of the season.

Fields-Thompson to Fight for Title

Chicago, March 15 (AP)—The National Boxing Association will recognize the winner of the Jackie Fields-Young Thompson fight scheduled for the Chicago Coliseum March 25, as the world's welterweight champion.

Joe Dundee of Baltimore, the present titleholder, has been given until March 21 to defend his crown by the association, but he has no title match booked.

Thompson, hard-hitting Pacific coast negro, scored a two-round knockout over Dundee here last summer, but the title was not at stake as he was forced to enter the ring over the welterweight limit.

Fields, a product of Chicago and who earned his reputation on the west coast, won a 10-round decision over Thompson later at San Francisco.

GREEN QUINTET LOSES STARS

Hanover, N. H., March 15—The Dartmouth basketball team will be hard hit by graduation. Capt. Spaeth and Austin, who have been constantly good backs, have rounded out their three years.

Read Hein, star center, is likewise through, and the graduation exercises in June will see Morse, Vedder and Phil May going out.

Coach Stark will have a good working nucleus next year despite the fact that he is losing several regulars. Heinie Swarthout and John Cheney will be available as forwards, as will Picken and Mylkyangas.

N. E. College Mat Teams in Title Meet at Harvard

BROWN IS PICKED TO WIN

Brown Team Has All 'Round Strength; Tech Wrestlers O. K.

By TED LYNCH

Harvard sport interest turns from hockey to wrestling during today and tomorrow, when New England intercollegiate wrestling championships are contested at the Memorial Gym.

This evening the wrestling teams from Harvard, Tech, Brown, Tufts and Williams have been in the trials. Grapplers contest in the semifinals and finals tomorrow night.

As an added attraction the above colleges, with the exception of Williams, will enter freshman teams in a minor championship which is bound to vie with the major contests. Two mats will be used in the varsity trials and semifinals with the finalists wrestling on a single mat in the order of classes tomorrow night.

BROWN FAVORED

According to records, Brown is the big favorite to win the contest. The Providence wrestlers have been undefeated this season and have run up a good record to date. Brown right now fears the Tech wrestlers, who, though defeated by Yale and Brown, might come through.

Five champions will be defending their crowns this evening. Gordon of Brown in the 115-pound class has been defeated once in dual competition this year and it is expected that he will retain his title. His main worry is Stella, the midget from Tufts, who licked him earlier in the year. A contest between this pair in the final would be fine.

Joe Burns of Harvard copped the title in the 125-pound class last year, but the crown has been on an unsteady pedestal ever since. Unless Joe suddenly returns to his last year's form, Garcelon, of Tufts leader and undefeated to date, will take the headpiece.

Experts claim that any one of several dark horses will win the 135-pound title, won by Capt. Joe Lifrak of Harvard last year. Lifrak is competing in the 145-pound class this year and has left his crown open to the best competitor.

LIFRAK MUST WORK

Lifrak will have his hands full when he tries to take the 145-pound title. Der Marderosian from Tech is after the crown and has a good chance to cop.

Walter Wentworth from Brown is about the best man in the 165-pound class, a new section this year.

Heavyweights always are the big attraction with the fans, and the heavyweight finals between Al Cornaweet, Brown, and Hingston, Tufts halfback, should be good. Neither man has been defeated this season.

Then there is the unlimited class with the title ready for the best bidder. Harry Cornaweet is the favorite.

SONNY DEFENDS MAT TITLE

opinion his flying tackle will once more gain for him the victory.

THE gate tonight will run close to $60,000. There is tremendous interest in the bouts and it is expected there will be few vacant seats in the Garden when the rival grapplers enter the ring.

Sonny has attracted some of the best people in the country to wrestling bouts. Governor and Mrs. Frank Allen will be among those who will see the fireworks set off in the title skirmish.

Sonny will receive 30 per cent of the gate receipts tonight, which will give him $18,000 in the event of a $60,000 house.

IN the preliminaries, Stanley Pinto, Bohemian champion, will be paired with Joe Shmikus of Worcester, Dan Koloff of Boston with Freddy Meyers of Chicago, Mike Nazarian, Armenian champion, with Jack Ganson of Cleveland, and Joe Wagner of New York with Frank Delmanno of the North End.

Newsy Notes From the Camps

San Antonio, Texas, March 15 (AP)—Handy-Andy Reese poled out a 400-yard drive over the center field wall as the Giants downed San Antonio yesterday, 15 to 5.

The ball sailed over the part of the fence on which is painted a sign: "For every home run hit over this part of the fence we will give a permanent wave."

Andy said, "Melvin could have the wave. He's single, and he's got black, wavy hair," he said.

Ft. Worth, Tex., March 15 (AP)—Boasting four straight exhibition victories over the Dallas Steers, the White Sox moved upon the Ft. Worth Cats for a three-game series today.

Most of the White Sox are in good condition, except Outfielder Johnny Mostil, whose infected toe is causing him some trouble.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15 (AP)—Charlie Root, ace of all Cub pitchers in 1927 and one of the big disappointments in 1928, was to receive his first real test of the season today.

Winter Haven, March 15 (AP)—Manager Shotten is well pleased with the condition of the Philadelphia Nationals, despite the loss of their first exhibition contest against a major league opponent, the Philadelphia Athletics. He was particularly impressed by the work of Tommy Thevenow, former Cardinal, whose baseball career was imperilled by a broken leg. Thevenow handled eight chances without a slip.

FT. Myers, Fla., March 15 (AP)—Jimmy Dykes, veteran second baseman, was injured in yesterday's tilt with the Phillies at Winter Haven when Lefty O'Doul slid into second. One of his fingers was cut so badly, that it is feared he will not be able to play for at least two weeks.

His place probably will be taken by Max Bishop, who has signed his contract.

Clearwater, Fla., March 15 (AP)—With Dazzy Vance about to enter the fold and Glen Wright's arm mending rapidly, Rickle fortune at last has deigned to smile on Wilbert Robinson and the Brooklyn Robins.

Robinson announced last night that Vance's demands for a salary of $25,000 had been met. News from Miami indicated that Wright's shoulder was responding to treatment and that the shortstop soon would be back in the game.

Avon Park, Fla., March 15 (AP)—Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals were soundly trounced at their home train park yesterday when Walter Johnson's Washington Senators put a 12 to 9 Indian mark on them.

Frankie Frisch made his 1929 bow as a pinch hitter in the seventh with a single. Of the six tossers used by Southworth, only Grover Cleveland Alexander and the southpaw rookie, Heise, showed anything.

New Orleans, La., March 15 (AP)—The weather has begun to worry Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians. There was little practice yesterday or the day before because of rain and Heiman field today was soaked.

Tampa, Fla., March 15 (AP)—If comparisons mean anything, the fourth place Washingtons of last year are headed for higher things in the American League.

Paso Robles, Calif., March 15 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates are going to give three pitchers a big number of in and outfielders and a catcher "a ride."

Chagnon, Lynn, Mass., recruit, Erickson and Mackay are the twirlers to be farmed; Jones, Winkle and Panella are the inner defense men and, should the Waner brothers come to terms either Grantham, Comorosky or Bricker as well as Martin and Frey, outer garden men, will get aboard the bush league special.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 15 (AP)—The same infield Manager Dan Howley expects to open the season for the St. Louis will get the call for the initial exhibition struggle tomorrow. It will be Lu Blue at first, O'Rourke, second Kress at short and Grimes, third.

Edwards to Try for Three Track Records

New York, March 15 (INS)—Phil Edwards, captain of the New York University track team, hopes to set three new records at the Knights of Columbus track carnival here tomorrow night. The negro star, who holds several records, but no indoor marks, will attempt to establish new world records at 500 meters, 600 yards and 660 yards.

Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish marvel, will try to set new marks at distances in his 5000-meter race.

Semi-Finals in Longwood Tennis

The winner of the semi-final match today between Mrs. Charles Hubbard and Mrs. Mary Lamme will meet Miss Margaret Blake of Boston in the finale of the women's national indoor lawn tennis championship at the Longwood covered courts here.

Joan McSheehy in Record Swim

Joan McSheehy of Whitinsville broke the world record for 75 yards when she negotiated the distance in 54 seconds in an exhibition swimming meet at the Brookline municipal baths.

Miss McSheehy's time was 54 seconds which is three-fifths of a second under the mark made by Sybil Bauer in Chicago in 1924.

The Whitinsville swimmer also equalled her own world record of 33 seconds at the 50-yard mark.

COLLEGE BOYS IN N. E. TITLE TOURNEY

C. boxers who will make their ring bow at the New England championships at the Eton Arena, next Monday and Tuesday nights, in the biggest amateur boxing tournament of the season, at the 16 representatives of Rhode Island will all be outfitted in be bathrobes, with Rhode Island's red rooster, with white background adorning the robe.

For Providence, like many other cities in New England, is taking an active interest in the tournament this year for the first time and all the recently crowned New England champions will be on hand.

Pat Jannmember of the varsity cross-country team at Brown University a holder of the 135-pound Rhe Island title, and Chick Gaim of Providence College, recent winner of the 147-pound title, are the college stars in the Province list of boxers.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

The Tigers are now leading the Canadian-American League race by five points and consequently they are on their way to their first title.

If the Tigers win one more of their remaining three games, the Providence club must take four in a row to top them.

Although the Springfield Indians turned in the best performance they have shown in weeks, they went down before the Tigers at the Arena. Although the Tigers were leading at the close of the first period by a single goal they had been outplayed by the Indians, but from then on it was all Tiger—that is, after Johnny Loucks had broken the tie.

Bob Taylor was the boy who had the sign on the Indians. He caged the first goal just 45 conds after the first faceoff when he took a pass from Frank Waite.

Taylor's goal was a very important point for the Tigers but it did not begin to compare with his effective checking. He tied the entire Springfield team in knots time and time again.

During the past month Taylor has adopted the Frank Nighbor style of checking and he has met with wonderful success. He circles up to the opponents' blue line and skates with the puck carrier. Due to his terrific speed, he has no trouble chasing up with his opponents and then it is a simple matter to either sweep or poke the puck away.

Paisey Calligbon has gone back noticeably. He does not appear to have been in condition all season and he was a mark for the Tigers last night. They went around him a mile a minute and encountered little trouble dodging the former Ranger.

Herb Rheaume was on last night He gave a very fine account of himself, but Springfield is accustomed to seeing Rheaume at his best. The Indians were in the Tiger territory far more than usual and Rheaume was obliged to be at his best, or the visitors would have filled up the net.

The Bruins substantiates did a terrible job on the Detroit Cougars, stepping through the winner of the third place in the American division to the tune of 5 to 1.

Dutch Gainor was the big hero of the Cougar game. He went through unassisted for three goals in the opening period. Gainor has annexed a total of six points this week and is now the proud possessor of 18 points for the season.

Realizing the importance of a victory over Newark tomorrow night in Springfield, Manager Eddie Powers ordered the Tigers to report for practice today. Although the Tigers have been playing wonderful hockey for the past month or so, Eddie Powers is too wise a manager not to realize that the deciding game is the toughest of all to win.

Bobby Connors did not use very good judgment when he attempted Bob drew two minor penalties in the game. If Bobby had gotten a major penalty in the game, he would have been out of the playoffs, as he already has two majors to his credit, or, rather, discredit.

Anxious to break away from their tie with the Philadelphia Arrows, the Newark Bulldogs will offer tough opposition for the Tigers in Springfield. Newark has been going well of late and Manager Sprague Cleghorn is set upon stepping aside and allowing the Arrows to drop to the bottom of the league race, even if he has to beat the Tigers to accomplish this feat.

Try and tell some Tiger fan that Frank White is not deserving of a place in the N. H. L., and see what a wild argument you have tangled yourself up in

School Fives Battle in Tech Tourney

LYNN WINS OVERTIME CLASH

Brockton Below Par in Victory; Arlington, Haverhill Survive First Games

By DICK McSWEENEY

Brockton high quintet was not at its best in its win over New Bedford Vocational in the Tech school court tourney

The is not said with any attempt to belittle the work of the New Bedford Vocational quintet, which is undoubtedly a great team, but it was apparent to the majority of spectators at the Tech gym that the Red and Black was not working as smoothly as is could.

The loss of Hallamore at right forward and the absence of Smolensky at right guard until late in the game slowed up the Red and Black to a noticeable degree.

But hearts of Brockton fans beat easier now that the New Bedford threat is out of the way, although the Shoe City youths have yet to be tested by the other sterling entries in the tourney.

HAVERHILL GOOD

From the way Haverhill played in the first period of its contest with Chelsea it was evident that Chelsea was in for a defeat

Haverhill's fine passing game, Richavich to Gill to White, aided in piling the point total up to 23, which was the final score.

French, at left forward, led the Chelsea squad in the matter of foul shots, sinking a total of four.

In the night games Lynn beat Cambridge by the close score of 29 to 28 in an overtime period, in one of the fastest games seen in the Hangar gym in years, and Arlington defeated Franklin, 25 to 15.

GOLDMAN FLASHES

In the overtime period of the Lynn-Cambridge game Goldman gave his team the two tallies necessary for victory

The outstanding stars of the game were Clancy on the Cambridge squad and Shapiro on Lynn

The efficiency of the referees, George Hoyt and Edward Kelleher, was highly pleasing.

Richavich, chunky Haverhill guard, was an important cog in his team's attack. Both he and Coleridge Gill, colored flash, fed White at center and gave the lanky pivot man plenty of opportunities to sink baskets. And how White did come through!

The Chelsea cheering section gave some amusing and hitherto unknown cheers, all of which brought chuckles to the fans.

Tony Lyons, Medford basket mentor, and Hubber Collins, director of physical education in the same city, were at the Tech tourney, accompanied by Ralph Kendall, Medford's popular faculty manager of athletics.

White, Haverhill center, accounted for 10 of his team's total of 23 points. Whenever he approached within striking distance he invariably sent the ball into the Chelsea hoop.

Two Cohens took part in the afternoon games, Cohen of Brockton scoring three points on four fouls, while Chelsea's Cohen remained scoreless.

Almquist of Brockton was responsible for nine of his team's points, collecting four goals and picking up one point on a foul shot.

Gomes, New Bedford Vocational center, played a snappy game for the Whalers. Martin and Pires also stood out for the Vocational quintet.

Lawrence worked well at right guard for the New Bedford Vocational quintet, playing a tireless game throughout.

The Hub schoolboys are still busy swimming. Latin meets Mechanic Arts and East Boston matches skill with South Boston today, both meets being held at Cabot st. baths.

Large Entry List for St. Joe's Show

The largest entry list in the history of St. Joseph's T. A. S. will meet in battle tomorrow night in Commercial hall, when the West End organization will stage an all novice tourney that is expected to produce the best fighting of the year.

There are novices in the 112-pound class, novices in the 118, novices in the 135, 147, 160 pounds, and novices in the heavyweight class. Such a collection of novice boxers has never before been assembled on the same night. They will come from all parts of New England, and so great is the number of entrants that the show will be started at 7:45 instead of the usual hour of 8.

RED SOX RECRUITS NO. 2

Horace Lisenebee

Horace Lisenbee, right-handed pitcher. Age 25, height 5:10, weight 165. Residence—Clarksville, Tenn. Had great year in Memphis in '26 and Washington bought him. Proved star of American League in '27, but got off to poor start last season and was sent under option to Minneapolis, where he won 8 and lost 6. Involved in Myer deal. Looked upon as a great pitching prospect.

Red Sox Rumbles

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 15—As far as allowing hits was concerned, Morris, Ruffing and Russell were equally stingy or generous, as the case may be.

Each gave the Reds four hits in three innings.

Morris and Ruffing gave a run each while Russell handed out two.

Bid Ed had the most stuff on the ball. Russell had the best control. Ruffing didn't seem to have a great deal, but he got by.

Phil Todt came through with two doubles and two singles in four trips to the platter. It was a most pleasant surprise as the Sox first sacker doesn't usually hit like that. If he could bat close to .300 he would be the best infield baseman in the business. Everybody hopes he continues to click 'em.

Bill Narlesky was in at short only during the last two innings but while he was out there he served notice on all that he is very much in the race for a regular job by pulling off three hair-raising plays

Otto Dumas, rookie outfielder, is suffering from an attack of boils

He has two or three on his arm and another on one of the fingers of his throwing hand. As far as is known, he has always played the outfield but before he became ill, he was doing a great job picking 'em up at third base.

The lame-arm squad, composed of Pitchers Danny MacFayden and Horace Lisenbee and Infielder Grant Gillis, is reported well on the road to recovery. All three athletes are down to see action against Indianapolis on Sunday.

The Rooters have started to leave town. Doctors Ross and Hughes and Johnny Igoe are now on their way home. The Sox started winning as soon as they left.

SCHAAF ROUGH ON SPARRING PARTNERS

Sparring partners are scarce in the camp of Ernie Schaaf, punching Hub sailor and while he is training daily with Marvin Schactor at Charlie Cardio's gym, Phil Schlossberg, his manager, sent out a call for heavyweights in hopes that the punching tar will be able to get in plenty of work for his approaching bout with Al Friedman of Roslindale, which tops the all-star card at the Boston Garden Friday night, March 22

It always has been the same story with Schaaf—heavyweights refuse to box with him in training And for this there is a good reason for Schaaf apparently carries all his fierceness into the ring in training as he does in a legitimate bout. He punches wickedly in these gymnasium sessions with the result that sparring partners gracefully distance him.

Kid Chocolate and Johnny Vacca collide in the ten-round semifinal

The preliminary card was completed last night by Eddie Mack at the Garden In the six-round event Fly Diamond of the West End will meet Billy O'Leary of South Boston. Three fours also are carded. Frankie Moore of the South End opposes Jimmy Scully of South Boston, while Frankie Stevens and Johnny Casper, two local boys, also will clash, and Johnny De Marco of Philadelphia faces Al Delgaldo of New York.

PERE FIVE ENDS HARD SEASON

The Pere Marquette K. of C. basketball team of South Boston will close the most successful season in history of their basketball five when they play the St. Catherine H. N. S. of Charlestown at the South Boston High gymnasium tomorrow evening.

The Charlestown team has gone through the season undefeated and is composed of former stars of the Boys' Club and Bunker Hill K. of C. The St. Catherines have one of the best centers in the city in Coo Thompson.

Florida Governor Opposed to Racing

Tallahassee, Fla., March 15 (INS)—Gov. Doyle E. Carlton today took steps to nip in the bud two reported race track ventures in Florida

The governor sent the following message to the sheriffs at Sanford and St. Augustine:

"I understand race tracks are to be opened up in your county with the prospects of gambling. I am depending on you to see that the laws are enforced. I am endeavoring to make this matter absolutely clear to start with."

Kaye Don Will Try for New Speed Mark

London, March 15 (AP)—Kaye Don, motor racing driver, will go to Daytona Beach next year to try to hold the world's speed record for Britain against American attempts to recapture it, says the Evening Star's motoring correspondent today.

A car capable of 260 miles an hour is being built for Don, who at the Brooklands motoring track this year and last, won the gold star presented by the paper.

Mandell Offered $40,000 for Title Go

Buenos Aires, March 15 (AP)—An offer of a $40,000 purse for a title match with the Argentine boxer, Justo Suarez, to take place here May 25, has been cabled to Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill world's lightweight champion, by the promoter of the National Box ing Association of Buenos Aires.

Golden Surprise Wins Greyhound Derby

Liverpool, March 15 (AP)—A Gordon Smith's greyhound Golden Surprise today won the Waterloo cup at a coursing meeting here known as the Grayhounds' Derby in which live hares are chased.

Golden Surprise defeated W Shaw a Bassoon in the final course The cup is valued at £100 and in addition there was a prize of £50 cash.

Boy Claims Another Swimming Record

Suva, Fiji Islands, March 15 (AP)—A new world record for 600 yards was claimed by Arne Borg, Swedish swimming star, today after he had covered that distance in the municipal sea baths in 6 minutes, 57 2-5 seconds.

Borg holds a number of swimming records from a mile down through various lesser distances.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"I HOPE Dave Posner drops in at the Garden tonight to see Gus Sonnenberg and Joe Malcewicz battle for the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world." said Mr. Boston today

"I want Dave to see how the sport which he always encouraged has grown. He will see Governor and Mrs. Frank Allen seated in the State box, which will be draped with the colors. He will find the leaders in civil and business life in New England present

"I venture that Eddie Foster, the energetic chairman of the Rhode Island Boxing Commission, will be close to the ring. Eddie did more than anybody else to encourage Sonnenberg during the early stages of his athletic career on the mat. The idea of a former All-American tackle bidding for the world's heavyweight wrestling crown made a strong appeal to Foster

"When Paul Bowser went to Dave Posner several years ago and asked his assistance in advertising big wrestling matches, he always received aid Dave didn't know a great deal about wrestling at the time, but he was for anything which tended to increase the health and happiness of our young men

"Maybe Bowser would not have gone so far in the wrestling game if it had not been for the assistance he received from Posner. Dave will get a thrill out of the brilliant gathering of ladies and gentlemen at the Garden tonight. His heart is sure to beat a little bit faster when Gus Sonnenberg, a former Dartmouth football hero, climbs through the ropes to defend his title against Joe Malcewicz. A. E. F champion in the days when Uncle Sam had need for all of his fighting men.

"I FIND that the matchmakers are already angling for the services of Riccaro Bertazolo, latest Italian heavyweight sensation, who is under the management of Frank Marlow. Bertazolo, who weighs 215 pounds and stands six feet two inches in height, will make his first Boston appearance at the Garden for Eddie Mack. He will then show at Col. Bob McKirdy's Arena A. C.

"McKirdy tells me a story in regard to a conversation he had with Frank Marlow, which should be of benefit to the young men of the boxing racket.

"McKirdy asked Marlow to sign Bertazolo for a bout at the Arena.

"'I cannot do that until after the Italian sensation has shown at the Boston Garden,' replied Marlow.

"'Have you a contract with the Garden?' queried McKirdy.

"'I gave Eddie Mack my word he could have Bertazolo in his first shot here,' answered Marlow. 'You know what that means You can then have Bertazolo for a bout.'

"'That's fine,' answered the colonel. 'I wish there were more managers who stood on their word and who did not have to be bound down by written contracts.'

"When Marlow showed Johnny Wilson here for the Suffolk A. A and Armory A. A. he never had a written contract. He gave his word and then kept it. The boys in the racket may not approve of this way of doing things, but somehow Marlow always keeps in the money while the sharpshooters only have their day of glory and then fade out of the picture. There is a reward for fair dealing even in the boxing game.

"TEX RICKARD never had much use for written agreements. He closed his last big match, the Sharkey-Stribling affair at Miami Beach, in a telephone conversation with Johnny Buckley. Tex and Buckley closed almost $2,000,000 worth of business with merely oral agreements"

St. Pete Chatter

By NICK FLATLEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15—This has turned into a country of steady winds, and fielders are getting wonderful practice for what will come in the northern spring.

Freddy McGuire is the daddy of 'em all when it comes to pulling down twisters.

Fred, by the way, is the daily Brave hero. He produced hits in the eighth and tenth rounds of the Braves victory over the Yanks, just when they counted. And he has ten fielding chances, half of which were remarkable.

Little Maranville plays third just as if he had been born there. He started a double play, after knocking down a liner, that would have swished past any other hot corner guardian.

Ruth, who hasn't his full swing working, tried to clip one down at the Rabbit, who was giving him the laugh. But the ball whistled on a line over the midget's head and went for a single.

If Bunny Hearn can show the brand of control he had doing his relief job he will not go back to the minors. He had plenty of stuff too.

The arrival of Joe Dugan may add a little punch, Joseph can hit them at times. The Big Boy will be kept for emergencies, even if he isn't able to run Lester Bell off third base.

Hennery Gowdy and John Evers are the champions of the club bridge league. They practice nightly on Jim O'Leary. Paul Shannon and Dave Rosen and always march off with the spoils. Just all 'round strategists.

Errors don't mean a thing in the spring. Boots by Harper and Farrell presented the Yanks with three runs in their big inning. Then the champions turned around and proceeded to toss three at the Trip Fair enough.

George Harper is finding his eye its strong suit once, but after that was robbed of a real hit by Gehrig, and then poked a single into right field. His champ will be useful.

The news of Sherwood Magee's death cast gloom over the camp. Good old Sherry used to be a Brave and was the Tribal umpire down here last spring. He injected more fun and sunshine into baseball than any other individual, and how he could hit that ball when he was good.

"Stores from Gulf to Great Lakes and Growing"

NO woman can afford to miss these magazine pages. Here you will find household information of great value, a wonderful article by an eminent physician, important advice on matters of etiquette by a woman who knows and fashion hints fresh from Paris.

Magazine Page

THE latest news and sketches of fashions appear each day on the magazine page of the Boston Evening American. Also Martha Lee's helps on cooking and the menu.

Martha Lee Tells of 10-Minute Dishes

SOMETIMES it's very difficult to get up a quick luncheon dish which is at all hearty in practically the time it takes to say "Jack Robinson." Most of the hearty foods take considerable time to cook, unless one has an emergency shelf and sees on it some of the hearty foods such as spaghetti, baked beans, a supply of the fishes, including salmon, sardines and tuna fish, corned beef hash, corned beef, veal loaf and the tiny Vienna sausage, besides a supply of fruits, including whole and sliced peaches, pineapple, apricots, and vegetables such as corn, peas and tomatoes. Then one is prepared, for, with these things on the shelf, a quick luncheon is a delicious possibility.

Martha Lee (c) Bachrach

A dish which might serve as a main dish, if a heavier dessert were served with it, is:

SARDINES AND PIMENTOS ON TOAST

Open can of sardines carefully and remove to a small skillet without breaking the fish. Fry in their own oil and then remove to pieces of hot toast. Add to the oil, 3 canned pimentos chopped fine, 2 tsp. chopped onion, 2 tbsp chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste, and saute until onion is a golden brown. Pour over sardines and serve hot. This recipe serves 4.

MEXICAN BAKED BEANS

For 8 people you would fry 16 rashers of bacon, remove to platter and keep hot. Pour off all but about 6 tbsp. fat. Add 3 onions diced and saute until golden brown. Add 2 No. 2 cans baked beans, 1 tbsp. chili powder and heat thoroughly. Add salt if desired to taste. Serve bacon on top. Serves 8.

ASPARAGUS TIPS WITH CHEESE SAUCE

Heat can of asparagus tips in their own liquor, then keep hot while making a sauce of 1½ tbsp. butter, 1½ tbsp. flour, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, ½ c. evaporated milk, ½ c. asparagus liquor, 1-3 cup grated cheese. Melt butter, add flour and seasonings and stir until thick. Then add slowly the evaporated milk mixed with the asparagus liquor (drained from tips after heating) and stir until thick. Add cheese, cook till melted, and then pour over the asparagus tips arranged on toast.

FRIZZLED CHIPPED BEEF AND CORN

For this quick dish 2 tbsp. butter or bacon fat, 1 2½-oz. glass chipped beef and 1 No. 2 can corn are needed. Heat fat in skillet, add shredded beef and let frizzle several minutes. Add corn and heat well. This recipe serves 4.

SPAGHETTI WITH BACON

A quick luncheon dish would be spaghetti and bacon. Immerse the canned spaghetti in boiling water, or pour contents from the can into a saucepan and heat. Fry as many slices of bacon as you like, turn the hot spaghetti into a casserole dish, cover the top with the crisp bacon and serve immediately.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Getting a perfect double, a black morocco purse divided itself in two exact parts, one side being used as a vanity compartment, the other designed to hold the shekels. Each side opens up separately, but they are mounted on the same square frame, and the circular ornament is placed between them.

Not only the absent minded professor, but many others should carry a linen handkerchief which has a printed watch in the printed corner. The watch hands point to various hours on various handkerchiefs, and so you choose your hankie according to the time of your appointment.

Costume Is a Foil to the Hat

IT IS characteristic of womankind to get all set with a new costume and lastly seek a suitable hat. The consequences are that sometimes trouble ensues.

Now comes a reversal in the sport of shopping. Instead of demanding a costume to offset it. Whatever havoc this method wreaks in the finite limit of selection, the most effective ensemble ever in should be created according to this plan—so it is decreed.

And why not? Is not the chapeau framing the charming face the immediate and instantaneous focus of all eyes?

Perhaps it began with Agnes when she designed a fetching little hat with its scarf that wound about the throat of the wearer. This could not be worn willy-nilly. And it is too picturesque to have been lost in the fashion bevy of clever new styles.

Scarfed hats or hats with scarfs are an interesting theme as illustrated in two models pictured, one done in bright red felt of brimmed lines having an attached scarf of red silk crepe incrusted with black and yellow silk. Separate are the second scarf and hat, the turban with cuff brim in white crepe de Chine, edged at the brim line with folds of blue, absinthe and yellow and the little cravat also of the white silk, its diagonal sections in the three colors.

Draped angora fashions the soft white spanish hat sheown, while for the tweed suit there is a becoming brim model of felt with a checked design, thus applied by an air brush.

Genius, Neurosis

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

THE genius, the neurotic and the person who is psychotic (who will eventually develop an insanity) all start the same.

That is, each of the three types of personality sees the world differently, although the final result is not identical in each case.

It must be borne in mind that we are not born intellectually and emotionally equal. That is, our ability to develop and the possibilities of development vary, and often greatly, one person from another.

The average individual, however, no matter what his developmental potentiality may be, does not vary sufficiently from the majority of the population to make him feel that he is very different from the rest. In consequence such a person harmonizes readily with the world. He fits in easily with its ideas. He swims along with the tide as it were, without any special effort.

But the genius, the neurotic and the psychotic soon find that they are at odds with the world, with its people, or with social manners and customs, or with moral standards or with something else.

They think differently from the rest.

They feel differently from the rest.

Often they act differently from the rest.

Now the neurotic, appreciating this difference, begins to worry about it.

He begins to wonder why he does not like this or that, why he doesn't think like others. And at once and the same time he begins to worry about it.

That explains the neurotic's tendency to self-accusations, feelings of unworthiness, inferiority ideas. They are not always like that, of course. Sometimes the neurotic is proud of his difference.

But always the neurotic tries everything he can to mould himself after the average world pattern. And because he does not succeed he suffers.

The genius, although likewise notes his differences, puts his differences into a play, a novel, a painting, a piece of sculpture, or he applies his different viewpoint to invention, the building of big business or exploration. This makes him happy and adjusted.

The psychotic, on the other hand, notes his differences and comes to the conclusion that he is right and the world at large is wrong.

Elinor Glyn Says:

By ELINOR GLYN

IF you really want to marry, girls, you must not encourage that instinct in yourselves which makes you like to herd with quantities of other girls, or you will pass your youth in a jolly kind of companionship, and wake up suddenly to realize that you are out of the running, and the new generation of flapper is snatching all the plums.

For in the springtime of life it is perfectly natural to desire a mate, and in these days with the freer sex becoming more numerous and the feminist movement having a good deal damped the chivalry and ardor of men, girls have to be particularly attractive to secure a choice of mates at all.

They cannot afford to stand by while their chorus are at their height. So make up your minds, Clara and Agnes, whether it is matrimony and a home and children you really want, or whether it is to go on through the years with a career and plenty of girl friends growing old like yourselves.

Only if you want one of these alternatives, do not use the methods which will draw the other.

Men's men are very often the most attractive to women, but girls—when markedly so—seldom draw braux bad, but true.

When Her Ship Came In

ALL her life Alice had wanted a fur coat.

All her life, that is, since she was thirteen and had first begun to realize that clothes—furs and silks and satins and soft crepe de chine—are the natural adornments of woman, the frames in which she enhances her beauty, the gilding of the lily.

Silks Alice had had, the sleazy, metallic silks of cheap silk stockings. And at sixteen she had a satin dress and a flimsy bit of lingerie that passed for crepe de chine. But she had never reached the pinnacle of her ambition. She had never had a fur coat. And now she was twenty.

Denial had but fostered her longing until now it was an all-consuming passion. A fur coat! Mink preferably, soft and smooth and warm, with a white fox collar that would frame her head like a halo. She spent hours gazing into the windows of fur shops, just longing with her whole heart for such a coat as embraced the lifeless figures of wax mannequins. So many of them, mink coats, beaver coats, squirrel coats, astute coats of leopard skin, and not one of them for her. She would sigh as she turned away and then steal back for a last glance.

Once she could have had such a coat, any coat she wanted. Dorfman offered it to her, Dorfman, who often visited her employer's office for no apparent reason other than to sit and talk to her and peep at her slender legs in their cheap silk stockings.

And Alice might have taken it if Dorfman had been more gentle and kinder, and if he had had more understanding and been wise enough to let the fur coat do its own pleading.

But he had put his fat hand over hers and called her "girlie," and his breath was heavy with the scent of strong cigars when he leaned forward to whisper. So Alice hadn't taken the coat, and afterwards, when she had found time to realize fully just what its acceptance would have meant, she had shuddered and was glad.

There were other men besides Dorfman, for Alice had the fragile, delicate beauty of the undernourished plant that blooms in the dark. Not all of them offered fur coats; some of them offered their hearts and their names, and such a one was Steve Callahan.

His hands weren't fat and heavy and he didn't call her "girlie." He called her "honey," and when she listened and nodded shyly and was crushed against his coat, there was just the faintest odor of sweet tobacco smoke in the soft, rough cloth.

And so they were married and settled down to wait for Steve to make a great name as a lawyer, and earn the riches which would mean a larger home and mahogany furniture and sterling silver. And, above all, a fur coat for Alice. A mink coat, with a white fox collar, lined with flowered silk, heavy and soft and warm. The coat she had wanted all her life.

"Sure," Steve had said. "A fur coat. That's nothing. You can have a new one every year. Just wait until I get a few big cases with real fees. We'll be riding high."

Alice waited and found the waiting very easy with love to spend the days. But, somehow, the big cases didn't seem to come, not to Steve, anyway. Alice's savings grew slowly, but eventually she had $600. That would buy a fur coat. Not a mink coat, perhaps, but a fur coat none the less.

Only it didn't. It bought little Steve instead. Bought him from the doctor and the nurse, and the hospital and sent him home, a little bundle of warm, pink flesh, safe from any mortgages.

For a long time, Alice didn't think about the fur coat. She thought about little Steve and a fur robe for his carriage, a robe that cost $60, but was finer than any other carriage robe that Alice passed, wheeling her baby up and down the block.

"Don't worry, honey," Steve said when she bought the robe for the baby. "We'll get that fur coat yet."

But still the big cases were slow in coming, and Alice's savings grew even slower. They did grow, however, and once more she had $600, and the coat already selected. Grey squirrel, soft and silky, that would wear and wear and wear.

But not on Alice. While she was putting on her hat to go downtown and get it, she looked at the living room furniture, scarred and sagging and broken. And she knew that she couldn't buy the coat. "A beggar on horseback," she said to herself, and went to the furniture store. If she had any regrets she hid them when Steve stretched out in his new easy chair with the patent foot rest.

The years went by and still the fur coat was but an unrealized dream. Alice grew heavier, her delicate beauty was a little faded and there were the faintest traces of wrinkles in the corner of her eyes. Little Steve had a brother and then a sister each time that Alice's savings reached a few hundred dollars something came to claim them.

And then, finally, the big cases began to come. Slowly at first and then more and more of them, with bigger fees each time. Until one day Steve brought home a thousand dollars in crisp new bills and dumped them into Alice's lap as she sat sewing.

"There," he said, "there's your fur coat. Don't be afraid to spend it. Get a really plenty nice."

For a long time Alice sat with the money in her hands. All her life she had wanted a fur coat and now she held it, a mink coat, if she wanted it.

If she wanted it? Somehow she didn't, now that she had it. All her life she had had her dream, to buy the fur coat now would be to end it, to end the sweet ecstasy of longing for something just beyond her reach. She had her husband and her children and her home. To have the fur coat would be to want nothing any more.

"I think I'll get one of those black broadcloth coats," she said to Steve.

"Perhaps a more practicable and all the little flappers are wearing fur coats now."

Girls When in Doubt—Wait

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

AMONG letters I receive from the lovelorn, I always find a goodly number from girls who can't make up their minds and hearts which suitor to choose.

Today I shall print excerpts from several letters of this sort.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes "Anxious": "I am a girl of eighteen. Some say I am rather good looking, but I don't think so. I am in love with a splendid young man of thirty. I don't think he cares for me, although when I meet him at a dance he always dances with me.

"On the other hand, there is a boy about a year older than I am, who seems to care a great deal for me. Sometimes I think I care for him, other times I don't want him around. Both young men are very attractive. Will you please advise me as to what I should do in this case?"

Well, "Anxious," in your case there will be little worry about making a choice, since you write that only one of the young men is interested in you. Mr. Thirty, with whom you fancy yourself in love, is 14 years your senior. He is much too old. I should say my dear, to be a good companion for you. Judging by his attitude, he thinks so, too.

Your younger friend you like but obviously you are not in love with him. Miss Sixteen 'just wasn't awhile and now things work out; that is my advice. Be charming to both your friends. You will not in any event wish to settle down to marriage for at least four or five years. By that time let us hope a young man will come along who will be neither too young nor too old for you, but just right in every particular.

Friends are faced with a more serious problem. Here is her letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 20 years of age, a blonde. I have many friends and am quite popular.

"I love a very nice young man with whom I have gone out occasionally for me, although he hasn't actually for a year. And I think asked me yet to go with him steadily, because he is taking up some new work, and I think he wants to wait until he finishes it.

"There is another fellow I have gone out with. He has asked me to marry him next year. I also accept him as a friend. I do not love him as a girl should love the man she is going to marry. Will you please give me some advice?"

Like "Anxious," whose letter I printed first, you care most, Frieda, for the young man who wishes to marry you, that you care for him only as a friend, although possibly, in time, you may learn to love him. Tell him you do not wish to go about steadily with any man to whom you are not engaged.

In a year's time, Frieda, one of several things may happen: The man who loves you may win your heart, provided you continue to encourage his friendship. The other young man may propose. Or a third may come along who will outshine both the others in your estimation. So wait!

"Rather tall, good-looking, very clever dancer, lots of pep and what he's not!" That is the way Bubbles describes herself. Three young men have proposed to Bubbles. Strangely enough, each one of the three young men knows about the other two.

"The third young man," writes Bubbles, "treats me with the greatest respect and I really think he means matrimony when he proposes. He buys me everything and my folks think he is perfect. He is of my nationality and religion.

"What I want to ask you is: Shall I tell him about my other boy friends or what?"

Are you actually engaged to the third young man, Bubbles? Judge you are, from your letter. So don't be secretive about it. Tell your parents and friends and the other young men. That's only fair and honest.

Since your parents approve him and you love him, and you two agree on religion, it seems to me yours is a clear case of choosing the man you love, marrying him and living happily ever after.

The RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

Revived by Merle W. Hersey

The Adventures of Great Detective Recounted

CHAPTER FIVE

Alice and Sophia escape from the old hotel and take refuge in an old house. There Sophia finds a friend—Wek Doon—who is in charge of a lot of smuggled Chinamen. He hesitates over helping them because Alice belongs to the Secret Service

MRS. SAM led Alice down stairs. They came to the little wicket door. It was locked.

The day dragged along. A storm came during the night. The wind blew a perfect gale, there was thunder and a heavy rain. Alice was wakened by Mrs. Sam. "I've made up my mind to pull out of here if you will go along with me. I'm going back home and I shall take the wooden idol with me. I was dead wrong to go back on Pa as I did."

"Well, that is sensible. Can we get by Black and his partner?"

Mrs. Sam led the way down stairs.

"There is only one way out and that is through Pa's storeroom."

Mrs. Sam kept the box with the wooden idol right with her all the time. She led Alice into the cool cellar. At the end of this was an old safe which occupied the whole corner. This was in fact a secret door, and Mrs. Sam showed Alice a keyhole in one side of it.

Alice went to work with her skeleton keys and soon had mastered the lock. The safe swung open and revealed a large square room beyond containing a number of packing boxes and trunks.

"Not much to see here," said Mrs. Ham, "but there is a big value here. I never brings anything up to New York until it's sold."

They passed into a long, dark passage and through another door which Mrs. Sam opened. They were now in the cellar of the round barn, which stood in the rear of the hotel. They gained the open and found a wind still blowing a perfect gale, but the rain had stopped. Black and his fellow guard were nowhere to be seen.

They hurried on. The sky was growing black again and another storm was evidently coming up. The rain held off until after they had sighted the old unpainted house a little way ahead. It looked as though someone might be living in it for a thin stream of smoke was ascending from the chimney.

They reached the door of the old house, bolted inside and were treated to a surprise. The floor of the main room, where a fire burned in an old cook stove, was covered with sleeping Chinese, all in American clothes.

"Oh, my!" gasped Mrs. Sam. "We're up against it now, all right." There was no chance of escape now. A Chinaman came out from another room and stood in the doorway looking at Alice and Mrs Sam.

"Who are you?" demanded the Chinaman in his native tongue. "How did you get here?"

"We lost our way and were overtaken by the storm. We came in here for refuge," responded Alice glibly.

"Is that your wife?" demanded the Chinaman, pointing to Mrs. Sam.

"Yes."

"You have come to a bad place. You are seeing something you have no business to see. Perhaps you are a detective. How do I know?" responded the Chinaman.

"That is nonsense."

The Chinaman suddenly shouted. "Wake up! Wake up! Strangers have come. Perhaps they are spies. Awake!"

Many sprang to their feet, some drew their revolvers as they came crowding about Alice and Mrs Sam. The man who had spoken checked any further movement.

"Wait, men," he said in his own language, "must go slow." Then addressing himself to Alice he said, "What brings you here"

"It was just an accident. We were overtaken by the storm. Allow us to remain and we shall be deaf, dumb and blind to all we see."

The leader seemed about to yield, but the others were doubtful. "They think you are a white man in disguise," was the reply. "You will have to be prisoners until we get out of this."

Surrounded by the threatening group the examination of Alice began. They discovered first that she wore a wig and then this was removed they could see she was a white woman. He pushed his search further and uncovered Alice's secret service shield. That settled it. She could not convince them she was not there on business.

"I understand," cried the leader. "Probably you two were in a party who were on the watch for us and in some way got separated from them. Is that it?"

"No, it's not so," replied Alice Then as a venture she went on to ask, "Is your agent Mr. Jonathan Jenkins?"

"Yes" cried the leader.

"Well, then," she said. "This lady is Sophia Jenkins."

"I thought I knew her," cried the leader.

"Oh, you are Wek Doon, who used to come in my father's shop."

"That's right."

"Oh, Wek Doon, don't let these men do us any harm, will you! I am so afraid."

"There will be no harm done to you, certainly, but how about this secret service woman?"

Listen, Wek Doon, Ah Sam is a villain. He deceived my father about the time of your landing. We came down here before the storm and Ah Sam went away to meet the steamer. Do as I tell you and you will probably get your tug. You want to take these men to New York in it, I suppose?"

"No. We are going to a place in Delaware. But I hardly know whether to believe you or not. Isn't there a wooden idol mixed up in this?"

Wek Doon seemed to hesitate Then he turned to his companions and reported that he was going with Sophia to the hotel and ordered them to remain quietly where they were until his return. They had not gone far before they noticed a column of smoke rising above the trees in the direction of the hotel. Wek Doon would go on no further and went back to the old house.

They had until nearly 10 o'clock when, finding that no one put in an appearance, Wek Doon again started with Mrs. Sam and Alice for the hotel.

When Old King Brady and Harry rang the bell of Jonathan Jenkins' house they hardly knew what sort of welcome they would receive They felt that the sly old rascal would not brook any interference in his smuggling affairs.

Mr. Jenkins received them with an anxious face.

"Well, what's the news?" he demanded

"Several things," replied the old detective. "In the first place we have managed to lose Miss Montgomery in Chinatown. We learn that she was kidnaped and carried aboard a tug by order of Ah Sam, and your daughter having sailed on the tug, also."

Jenkins started to the telephone and called up a man by the name of Gorman.

"I say, see if the Rosa May is in the slip, will you?" After a minute he said, "She sailed last night. Was Ah Sam on board? Great heavens Captain Wimple has betrayed me. Don't go out for a while, Gorman, I may want to call you up again. He turned to the Bradys.

"I don't know what to do. Oh, if there was only someone I could trust."

"What is the matter with trusting me?" asked the old detective.

He shook his head gloomily.

"Come, come, Mr. Jenkins," said Old King Brady, "what's the use of beating around the bush? You are in a smuggling business with both feet and everyone knows it. Ah Sam has taken your daughter and my partner to some holdout of yours along the coast. I'm ready to follow All I'm out for is to find the wooden idol and rescue Miss Montgomery."

Jenkins turned to the telephone and called up a man by the name of Gorman.

"Will, all right, then. I'll get a tug and we will chase them up. I won't tell you where we are going is that all right?"

"Yes. How far?"

"About a hundred miles, perhaps a little more. I'll go and see about another tug."

"What? You mean to start to night?"

"Yes, the sooner the better."

"We are ready, but I fear the undertaking will be too much for an old man like you."

"I don't know that I'm any older than you are, Brady! I'm good for many a year yet." How little he knew what was in store for him!

The Bradys went down to the street and the Bradys heard the telephone ring. There was a lapse of a few minutes and then a startled cry rang out through the house.

"Murder! Help! Brady! Brady! Quick!"

The Bradys dashed up two flights of stairs with all speed. They could hear a scuffling going on in the back chamber on the second floor They burst into the room to discover old Jenkins grappling with a Chinaman.

There was blood on his coat and blood on the floor, where lay a knife.

Happy Dreams!

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

WHAT a wonderful place is the Land of Dreams. There all our wishes and hopes and dearest dreams come true! There we can be what we will and every wish is fulfilled! Too bad that we have to awaken to the reality of everyday life, isn't it? Woman Sleuth Plays Big Part in the Story

"Help, Brady! I'm almost gone'" gasped Jenkins as the detectives entered. Probably he was, but the old man's strength must have been enormous at the start.

He had the ICh nanan by the throat with his right hand, and his arm pinioned the fellow's left, while with his own left he sought to wrench away the revolver.

The Chinaman was black in the face, but was still struggling for all he was worth. Harry instantly covered him.

Old King Brady gave him a smart rap over the head with the butt of his revolver, ordering an immediate surrender.

"Let go! We've got him, Mr. Jenkins. If he makes a move he is a dead one!" cried the old detective.

"Which I am, as it is, I'm afraid!" gasped the old sinner and, letting go, sank unconscious to the floor.

The Chinaman was shot done for, too. He dropped the revolver and tumbled into a chair, panting and gasping.

Harry, taking no chances, promptly handcuffed him.

Meanwhile, Old King Brady was giving first aid to the injured man. He ripped Mr. Jenkins's coat, vest and shirt down the back, exposing the wound, which was directly under the left lung. It looked as though the knife might have penetrated the lung. The wound was bleeding and the old detective bound it up with an improvised bandage. He and Harry then lifted the sufferer on to the bed and administered whisky from Old King Brady's flask.

This seemed to revive him and he lay groaning while the old detective knelt at his shoes and further loosened his clothes. "Who is your doctor?" he demanded.

Mr Jenkins murmured a name and Harry quickly found it in the book and got the doctor on the phone.

Thus far the Chinaman had not spoken. Old King Brady tried to question him, but all the answer he could get was "Me no sabee Eliss."

"Brady!" gasped the wounded man, and the old detective turned to his bedside. "It's stabbed me in the back while I was talking over the 'phone," he murmured "He must have been hiding under the bed. Treachery! This is Sophia's work."

"Ah Sam's more likely," said Old King Brady.

The knife penetrated the lung," the doctor reported on examining the wound. "He is liable to go into a hemorrhage at any moment." This was said to the old detective in the dark. He wisely thought he should tell Jenkins

"I think you had better," said Old King Brady. It was done. But the old pawnbroker would not agree to it. "I shall get well." he declared. "I don't care what you do or say, I shall pull through. I want all of you to leave the room but Mr. Brady."

They humored him in this, the old detective directing Harry to call up the police station and have the patrol wagon sent after the prisoner. The wagon was just arriving and Harry explaining things to the police when Old King Brady entered the room.

"He is gone!" exclaimed the doctor after one glance at the old detective.

"Yes. He went of with a hemorrhage just as you said he would."

The police went upstairs and looked around. Not a word could be gotten out of the Chinaman.

The doctor called in a man to act as caretaker and after an hour or so left the house in company with the Bradys

"Well," the doctor remarked as they walked up 66th st., "so that's the end of old Jenkins. They say one must not speak against the dead, but all the same I am going to say he was one of the meanest men in New York, and his daughter is even meaner than he was. He must have left a lot of money behind him, which will astonish everyone when it comes to light. There'll be a great scramble among his creditors now"

"Does he owe much?" asked the old detective.

"He owes everyone who would trust him, myself included," was his reply.

After he had gone Harry questioned his chief.

"Yes," replied the old detective. "He's told me where his smuggling hangout is." And he named a certain point on the Jersey coast.

"Why, the old man owns three tugs outright, if you will believe it," the old detective went on to say. "I've got the address of the man Gorman who has them in charge. It's Rutgers slip."

"Going to use one of 'em?"

"No. The captains are not all in the deal, of course, and this one might make us trouble. We'll get a tug of our own with a few extra men in the crew and make a quick a start as possible."

They proceeded to Coenties slip, where many tugs tie up. The one the Bradys engaged was the Sprite, Capt. Van Voorst, who got four men from a lodging house nearby. It was after one when they got under way. With the long run ahead there was nothing better than to go to bed and rest.

The old detective learned nothing of the woodon idol, for the latter gave him a wide berth and up to his last moment that he would recover. Thus the Bradys were still in the dark.

he was thrusting at hers, the face—as she saw it—of a man on the brink of frenzy. "Why did you write that?" A quivering forefinger indicated the word of dread.

"I don't know," the woman declared, more indignantly than as if afraid of him. "Let me go, you're hurting me!" She tried to wrench her wrist away. "Please let me go —I'll try to explain.

He held her another instant, helpless, glowering, but distrust then relaxed his grasp.

"I don't know," Miss Fenn sullenly protested. "I don't think I've ever heard it before. It came into my head while we were talking. I didn't know I was writing it. How could I, when I was looking up at you all the time? You know I was . . . It wrote itself, somehow. Things like that have often happened to me before. You see, it's true—I'm psychic."

"Psychic!"

"In a way . . ." Ernest nods affirmed the statement. The woman seemed to have forgotten her anger. "I've done automatic writing ever since I can remember."

"Are son," he faltered, "his name was Ernest Streator."

"Oh!" In an instant the vivid face was overcast, spontaneous sympathy like a mist blurred the clear chiseling. "He is—dead?"

"The War took him . . . He was killed in nineteen-fifteen, somewhere in France."

"How I wish I could help you. If I could and you would let me . . ."

"Ah!" Streator interrupted with a smile more tired than patient—"Spiritualism."

"Not spiritualism!" she vigorously cried back. "Suppose Spiritualism could put you in touch with your son—"

"Don't!" the man begged—"please—it's cruel—"

"Suppose," the woman persisted as if he had not spoken, "Spiritualism could make it possible for you to communicate with your son, send him messages and get back answers, or even speak with him —it has done as much for others—would you go on denying its power.

Mary was in bed when Streator got back to the parsonage. But when he had kissed her good night, instead of going he lingered, sitting on the edge of the bed and holding her hand, for many minutes silent

"I must be a rather interesting woman today," he began and told her a plain tale of his meeting with the psychic woman

"And when we consider," Streator was concluding, "that Dal may be near us in the spirit even now, patiently waiting till we provide a means for him to converse with us, such as this automatic writing . . .

He sighed. "Surely there can be no harm in trying."

"I don't knew," the woman temporized. How could she bring herself to dash his hopes who had as yet hardly given them a hearing? How balk him, who was all she had left to love, of his heart's desire? "Give me a day or two to think it over. Let me first meet this Miss Fenn . . ."

Having met her and liking her the subject of a seance took definite shape.

The "circle" was to include only the three who had loved Dal with the psyche.

She arrived in bubbling spirits, as Ruth started as the day broke gray Both knew a change before dark

Shirley came afoot to the parsonage for supper—the smother was too dense for driving—and wished she had not. She wondered if four people in such diverse tempers had ever before gathered round a board and made any pretense of trying to be concenial Streator was by turns impatient and exhilarated. Mary was worrying about him and harassed by forebodings

That sitting remained with them a terrible, a disturbing thing for the insidious pencil wrote that Dal was trying to come back in a message addressed to Shirley.

Evidently he had something on his mind that he must say before he could rest quietly in his grave.

"What was that thing?" Mary asked the minister when they were alone.

I don't know. How should I?" Mary had not moved to follow, but her accents of distress pursued him as inexorably as the scorpions of his conscience. "If it is true that his spirit had found its way back and tarried with us, seeking as it seemed last night to seek the first opportunity to speak to us, something must be troubling it—

"Stronger than love?"

"Stronger than death."

"You don't believe, then"—Streator stood facing the fire-blank window, his back to his wife —"you don't believe love alone could bring Dal back?"

She responded with a piteous smile, all pain and wry: "Love is too much for us, Andrew —love is for gods, not men."

He gave a cry of contrition and went swiftly back to her. "Mary! forgive me . . ."

She yielded to him. "I have forgiven," she breathed to his bosom —everything. I love you."

He replied in a strengthened voice: "I have never known till now how much I love you—now when it is too late."

"Too late?"

"I am unworthy. Long ago I forfeited the right to hold your love"

"If that is true, make yourself worthy of it again . . . We have only each other left."

"It is too late—"

"No!"

"What is done can never be undone."

"If you believe that, you have renounced the creed you preach, that God's pity is boundless, His clemency cancels every sin."

"There are some past even His forgiving—"

"One only." A full tone solemnly rang out its name: "Fear." The minister started back as from an unanticipated blow, but his wife continued to entreat him with a pathos that used her like a devouring flame. Oh, Andrew! cease to be afraid—"

He broke in, hoarsely stammering: "Of what should I be afraid?"

"You have never told me." His look cried for mercy, but she loved him too well.

"Fight down this unmanly fear," she went on "and master it—master yourself and become again the brave and honest man I married." She could feel the duel of man's two natures raging in him with the fury of elemental forces antagonized, was herself almost as ravagingly racked "Oh, Andrew!" she sobbed—"Oh, my dear! I am so sorry for you."

He would not meet her eyes lest their compassion emasculate his purpose. "I must go whatever way He leads me. Only—I shall beseech Him first to let me make my peace with Dal"

"Through Miss Fenn, you mean?"

"If the thing is feasible by such means . . . If His charity will bear with me so far"

Shirley explained the reason for the fascinating Miss Fenn's frequent visits to the parsonage to Dr. Pentecost.

"Do you happen to know what 'results' she has obtained in these sittings?" he asked.

"There's only been one."

"Mean to tell me Mary and Andy were satisfied with one try? Then why is Miss Fenn extending her visit?"

"They want to go on with the sittings, but won't without me."

"Don't be cynical, Allen," Shirley pleaded, "I just can't make up my mind to encourage them; somehow I feel so certain it isn't right and will all end in something—I don't know—calamitous—anyhow, terrible."

Pentecost persuaded her to go with the seances and added unctuously: "I might have a whim to drop in, passing by, and watch the machinery at work, with my big, round eyes."

Shirley kept her word and the seances were resumed. Again the psychic sat blindfolded, the pencil in her hand.

Soon the pencil began to move with firm decision outlining, geometrical figures that proclaimed "Eyes" to be Carlotta's nonce control.

The pencil sped across the paper to write

"Too bad I was cut in on that time, sir, just when you asked me about a son of yours who had fallen at the Front. Dalzell Streator?"

"Yes," the minister replied, his voice breaking.

"You named my son just now; does that mean you know him?"

The reply came without hesitation, and again in script running lightwise down the pad:

"No. I've been asking fellows over here, but no one seems to know him. What was his regiment?"

Streator named it. The pencil commented:

"Funny—plenty of chaps I know this side went West from that battalion, but no Dal Streator."

At this juncture Shirley took a hand without ceremony, sharply catching up the pencil on what she took to be a glaring blunder. "How did you know we called him Dal for short if you didn't know him?"

The pencil hesitated, swerved away to the upper right-hand corner of the pad, and halted there. "Sorry—he wrote—blocking the line again—looks like another washout."

Shirley started back in dread a step. Carlotta was moaning through set teeth; her extended arm shaking as it might have been in the hold of hands invisible but powerful and rude, the pencil describing wild zigzags across the pad from edge to edge that rendered the top sheet useless for further writings. As one hypnotized Shirley reapproached the table, tore off the defaced paper, let it fall to the floor, stood over the weaving pencil with hands caught at her bosom. Vaguely she was aware that Mary and Streator now stood, quaking by her side, and saw the minister lean forward from the chair whose arms he was grasping as if he meant presently to rend them from their framework—and, too, fear whitely glimpsing in the eyes he sheered toward the windows.

Neither could she, for all her dread, refrain from looking. His head with the lamp left the room all in deep shadow, apart from the top of the table, so that the moonwitten night was a pallor in the windows. But beyond the screens the girl saw nothing, at least no thing that moved. Any cramped vista, of the front lawn with the picket fence and its gateway, dumbly outlined in opalescent haze.

Mrs. Streator exclaimed beneath her breath and Shirley looked back to Carlotta. The woman had lapsed into passive submission to the dictates of the usurping control; her head drooped and Shirley had surely known it would be, was now seeing Dal's handwriting, more firm than before, characteristic beyond any challenge.

"Shirley dear, be brave. You said come back. I am trying, only give me a little time . . ."

"Dal!" That half-strangled scream exploded through Streator's lips as he leaped out of his chair to lean with a tremble over the table and—forgetful of that shape of horror which might be lurking outside the window—read the words of Dal's message to Shirley as fast as the pencil traced them. "Dal! O my boy! is it you? is it you at last, truly?"

The pencil broke off on the word time and darted toward the minister like an animate thing infuriated, Dal's script fell from its point so swiftly it was hard to believe any hand but one superhuman could be controlling it.

"You keep out—it wrote—I'm talking to Shirley—You've used her enough. As one hypnotized

"But Dal!" the minister pleaded, his voice piteous, "won't you hear me? I've come to see I was in error to tell you I'm sorry?"

He was being answered before he had finished.

"That helps, doesn't it?—your being sorry—after all the devil's work you've done there's no use doing—"

"Dal! I beg of you, in the name of pity—!"

"As if you know about pity! you and your determination to break the lives of everybody around you with your lies—"

"Dal!"

Shirley heard that name breached in accents of heartrending supplication addressed to a mere pencil, saw Streator's clasped hands of entreaty quivering above that common tool of wood and lead, and experienced a sense of personal recession from the scene —found herself looking on at it as she might have been one of an audience in a playhouse, attending a play composed by a madman, played by mad actors. Or, if there were reality in what she saw, the world itself had gone stark raving mad . . .

"You lied—the pencil raced as while Streator was still speaking—lied when you said you had mourned Tom Daizell, lied when you told me you weren't my father—"

CHAPTER 22

SLOWLY, Brett climbed out of his own car and crossed the road. Six pairs of eyes, with expressions varying from amusement in those of Mr. B. to complete disinterest in those of young Alex, were upon him. Adrienne Henley-Martin looked scornful, but the eyes of the Desert Rat held blazing hatred

Felicia surveyed her husband coldly.

"Mother's just come west, and we were driving out to Tahoe to see you," she said. "I'd heard you were there and just thought I'd ask if you'd decided to be decent about my suit." She looked at him contemptuously. "I brought my child with me because I've found it advisable to keep guard over him!" Memory of the agonies she had gone through made her tremble. "Oh, you brute!" she cried.

"Felicia—"

"Oh, what can you possibly have to say that I want to hear?" she interrupted him, fiercely. "I was crazy to come here at all! Mother thought that if we all talked—but look at you! You're not even honest in your meanness!" Her eyes flickered over Zelda O'Day, who was smoking a cigaret in complete unconcern.

"I see you have your lover with you!" Brett flung back at her.

Dick started to his feet, but J. B pulled him back

"Pipe down, Dick—you can't wallop an old man."

Adrienne Henley-Martin flashed a grateful look at J. B. but Brett was fuming. There it was again—old man!

"I thought your quarrel wouldn't last long," he sneered. "Lovers' disagreements—" Felicia's eyes widened, and he laughed unpleasantly "You see I know everything about you and your Mr. Stuyvesant!" he told her. "Everything!"

Her eyes did not falter. "You know nothing that can do me any harm, Alex," she told him, steadily.

Miss O'Day yawned. "How changeable he is!" she commented, socially, to Felicia. "A few minutes ago he was telling me—"

Brett covered the girl's mouth with his hand.

"I think I'll take the youngster up the road to chase butterflies or something," J. B. whispered to Mrs. Henley-Martin. "Want to come along?"

Felicia's mother was twisting her fingers nervously. "You're a very nice person, Mr. John Yerkeley," she said, and taking the boy in her arms, she got out of the car and the three sauntered up the road.

The Desert Rat had been leaning forward, his eyes on Brett's face,

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The World's Greatest Authority

AT NO TRUMP AND AT HEARTS.

PLAY AT AUCTION BRIDGE.

At Auction Bridge, one No Trump by South secured the contract.

West opens the 4 of Clubs, the fourth best card of his stronger long suit. East wins with the Ace and returns the Queen to take Dummy Jack and establish his own 10 in case South holds the King. The Queen winning, East leads the 2 rather than the 10.

West is marked with four Clubs, originally, and South therefore with three. If South is holding the King, he must win the third round and East will then report with the 10, a higher Club than the remaining one held by his partner. This may enable East to secure the lead, in which case he would lead a Spade up to Dummy's weakness.

But West is unable to locate the 10 and consequently plays the 9, and takes the fourth Club trick with his King.

West than leads the 2 of Spades, the fourth best of his second four-card suit. Declarer winning with the King, puts Dummy in with the Queen of Diamonds and successfully finesses Hearts, winning the rest of the tricks. Score in tricks 30, in honors 30.

PLAY AT CONTRACT BRIDGE.

At Contract Bridge, played by North at four Hearts, East opens the 4 of Spades. Dummy wins and puts Declarer in with a Diamond. Declarer leads the 10 of Hearts and finesses, then the Queen of Hearts, finessing again, East holding off each time, since to cover would accomplish nothing. On the third round the King is captured. Declarer then takes the winning Spade and his winning Diamonds, and concedes two Club tricks, making five odd on the hand.

Score in tricks, 150 points. No honor score.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions pertaining to Auction Bridge. Write him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

Mr. KNICKNACK

Everything on the Level

By Don Herold

YOU WOULD SURELY HAVE BEEN LOST LAST NIGHT BEHIND THAT TALL MAN AT THE THEATRE IF YOU HADN'T HAD THAT LONG-TAILED COAT
BUT I FELT PRETTY RIDICULOUS, WALKING DOWN THE AISLE WITH THAT MONKEY TAIL
THERE SHOULD BE SOME BETTER WAY FOR A SHORT MAN TO GET HIS MONEY'S WORTH BEHIND A TALL MAN AT A THEATRE
EQUAL VISION FOR ALL SHOULD BE THE MOTTO OF EVERY THEATRE— AND THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY TO BRING IT ABOUT——THERE IT IS, GIRLS— MY PNEUMATIC THEATRE SEAT WHICH THE USHER CAN DEFLATE FOR TALL PEOPLE AND PUMP UP FOR SHORT ONES.

HOW TO ENTERTAIN PARLOR GUESTS

Editor's Note: The second act of the dramatic dialogue, "True Courage," reprinted from "The Home Speaker and Elocutionist," continues our series on Parlor Tricks.

Yesterday Ralph Burton told his Cousin Laura that Frank Sterling was a coward, and Laura inquired how he had shown it.

Now go on with the playlet—

TRUE COURAGE

(Act Two)

RALPH—Hoy has he shown it, indeed? Why, a dozen boys have dared him to fight and he refuses to do it.

LAURA (indignantly)—A coward, indeed! By your test a bully is the most courageous of gentlemen.

R. (firmly)—I am serious, Laura. The other day Tom Harding put a chip on a fellow's hat and dared Frank Sterling to knock it off. But Sterling folded his arms and walked off, while we all groaned and hissed.

L.—You groaned and hissed? Oh, Ralph, I did not believe you had so little of the true gentleman about you.

R.—Come, now, what do you mean?

L.—Did you see that boy go up the ladder at the great fire last night?

R. (admiringly)—Yes, wouldn't I like to be in his shoes! They say the Humane Society is going to give him a medal; for he saved a baby's life, and no mistake.

L.—What boy was it?

(The mystery is explained and concluded in tomorrow's issue.)

"Most of the stock market speculation now evident is legitimate investment by corporations and individuals who are buying stocks outright for a constructive purpose."

Definition—

Prosperity is a frame of mind engendered by having a good income tax lawyer.

Conversation overheard on a bus—

A.—But I thought you liked Mr. McCush.

B.—I did at first.

A.—Didn't he treat you right?

B.—For a while, and then... (sniff...sniff)....

A.—Don't sob, dearie—you'll attract attention.

B.—And then.....he.....proposed marriage!

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

Are you going to marry that Chatterbox, Miss Morrow?

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

In the list of divorce cases down for hearing in the present London law sittings wives outnumber husbands by more than two to one as petitioners.

One lady in a southeast suburb in London has feet so small that she can wear children's size 13 shoes. She is keen on outdoor sports and a great walker.

Every police beat maintained for the full twenty-four hours in London costs about $5000 a year.

The birth-rate of 16.6 per 1000 living of all ages registered in 1927 was the lowest ever recorded.

Thirty-one cities in the world have more than 100,000 telephones London is the only British city among them.

About 10,000 children of school age are living in the general wards of poorhouses, mixing with all sorts of people, including the feeble-minded.

his body tense, and Dick watched him closely.

"Don't you let this old bully scare you!" Miss O'Day advised Felicia. "I think I'll walk home—it won't be the first time!" She smiled, waved impudently at Brett, and started up the road.

"Alexander Brett—always the cad!" It was the Desert Rat, straining toward the retired diplomat, quivering like a leashed animal.

Brett looked at him insolently. "Hello, Stephen Pierce!" he said. "Good many years since I've seen you!"

"It's 20 years." The Rat's voice was low, ominous. "Thirty years since you used to come to my house as a friend."

Felicia turned, startled, and looked at the old man. The voice, deadly now, went on:

"Thirty years since you made love to my wife—got her to run away to Europe!"

Brett laughed shortly. "You've changed, Stephen!"

"Changed!" The Rat's thin face glowed with passion. He trembled. "Yes, I've changed! My life bound up in her—wrecked when you took her away. I didn't care. Business—friends—but I didn't care. I came out here. Nearly 20 years in the desert." Then he flared, "Yes, I've changed, Brett. Maybe you'll find that out!" His rose suddenly, but Dick pulled him back to his seat.

"And how you succeeded at the chance to get back at me!" Brett sneered. "You think you're very clever, I presume, with your knowledge of paths through abandoned mines!"

Felicia gasped. So Brett had learned that, too! Dick's hand closed warmly over her trembling fingers.

Brett turned on Felicia.

"You think you can beat me—you!" he taunted her. "You think that because I'm old, you can get rid of me and marry this young pounder!" He jerked his head at Dick.

Felicia's eyes darkened. "There's no thinking about it! I'm doing it. I could divorce you, anyway, after tonight—what I've seen—we've all seen. There is no possibility of doubt!"

Brett laughed. He pointed a finger of scorn at the Desert Rat. "Look at him, Felicia! Look at that wreck of what was once man!"

Heeding Dick's cool counsel, Stephen Pierce sat quietly now, listening.

"Because—years before I knew you, my dear—his wife happened to take a fancy—a passing fancy, at first—to me, he thought he could hurt me! He tried to make trouble, tried to ruin my career! Now you dare defy me. I warn you, I'll wreck your life as I did his if you don't obey me. Take warning from what I did to him. Look at him now—look at him, Felicia!"

Felicia looked at the Rat and smiled, her eyes warm with tenderness. "I've loved him ever since he saved Alex from you and I saw how much my boy loved him," she told her husband. "And now—since I've heard what you did—I love him all the more. He's two things that you will never be, Alex—a man and a gentleman!"

Brett glared. "You'll pay for that, Felicia! You'll come back to me on your knees, begging me to take you in!"

Felicia turned to Dick. "Go and find Mother," she said. "There's no sense in staying here any longer. We'll go back to Reno." Dick obeyed her.

Quivering with rage, Brett stared at the two people whom he hated most in the world, the two people he had most deeply wronged. And he gave way to an unreasoning desire to hurt the man who'd rescue of his son had taken from him his strongest weapon in his fight against his wife.

"She was a pretty little thing—that wife of yours," he said. "Lovely figure. What was her name, anyway?"

Stephen Pierce made a strangled sound. Felicia, in the front seat of the car, turned in time to see the knife flash in the reflected light of the car lamps as Pierce leaped for Brett's throat.

BAER FACTS -:- BY 'BUGS' BAER

WE extend our congratulations to El Paso.

That city is the capital of all Mexican wars.

El Paso is an American town until trouble starts in Juarez.

Juarez is always the first place to be captured in a Mexican revolution.

Rebels think that the way to capture Juarez is to shoot at El Paso.

Loyal troops imagine that the way to defend Juarez is to shoot at El Paso.

Living on the border is almost the same thing as having Chicago and New York for suburbs.

When the Mayor of El Paso wakes up in the morning and hears bullets teasing his ears he knows that the Mayor of Juarez is in danger again.

Our State Department has repeatedly requested the revolutionists to use blanks in their Old War Weeks.

Either that or to stage their battles in Texas and shoot out toward Mexico.

This last procedure would include El Paso in the safety zone. No town likes to be the sounding board for foreign orchestrations.

It is fortunate that the revolutionists have rifles instead of artillery.

If they had big guns they could fire Big Berthas in Mexico and make Little Evas up in Minnesota.

According to numerous pacts, codicils, agreements and treaties, America is at peace.

But El Paso is in the unfortunate position of a consumer who is unable to select his own producer.

Bullets are spanking and whanging up the main streets of that quiet Texas town like subsidized hornets.

It's like being slapped over the skull with a blackjack in the hands of a good-will ambassador.

There is only one way of making a safe campaign speech in that neighborhood. Jump into a barrel and talk through the bunghole.

While it is not polite to look over the back fence while the neighbors are quarreling, it is impossible for El Paso to be neutral when the Juarez Chamber of Commerce is broadcasting civic pride at a high rate of velocity.

Even though the Rio Grande flows between the two towns, you cannot get a 12-mile zone out of a shallow river 11 feet in width.

If the war lasts two months then El Paso will be safer. About that time the hostile armies will either be out of ammunition or taking better aim.

All sorts of crooks and crannies now house the staid watch, both for Monsieur and Madame. Flasks, cigarette boxes, lighters, calendars, inkwells and all sorts of unexpected places harbor miniature timepieces. Even a smart driving glove displays a jeweled watch in its gauntlet cuff.

A high spot among colors seems to have been reached in the new orange red shade which is successfully invading Southern resorts. This shade is also combined in smart tri-color effects in braidings of felt strips and narrow grosgrain ribbon. Black, beige and navy are particularly striking with it.

MANY LIVELY DANCE TUNE PROGRAMS

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE AIR doesn't carry anything of a startling nature tonight, but the listener will find plenty of variety and an abundance of lively music and patter. The shining light of the evening is Fannie Brice in Veedol's Columbia broadcast at 8:30. Julius Tannen as master of ceremonies will share honors with the comedienne. Two dance programs of overflowing good measure come with the Wrigley Review and the Pennsylvania Grill orchestra at 9 and 10:30 respectively. Cities Service Orchestra and Cavaliers will give a miscellaneous program of the usual fine type at 8 o'clock.

FOR VETERANS

JOSEPH REGAN, famous Irish American tenor appearing this week at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theater, has received a special request from the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at Rutland to broadcast again some of the songs that he used in a recent Radio-Keith-Orpheum hour. In order to conform to the wishes of the veterans, WEEI will broadcast a series of songs today between 5:30 and 6 p. m. Regan is a Bostonian who has achieved fame on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage.

BABY FRANK A. DOLL
92 BRIDGE ST.
MANCHESTER, N.H.

Mrs. Anna Doll says of her 2-year-old son, Frank: "I had to watch my little boy all the time. He has been troubled with constipation since birth and I had to give him Castoria every night. He didn't seem to want the food I prepared for him no matter what it was. Since having the whooping cough he has been worse and looked so pale and thin and his eyes were dull and he was extremely nervous and wouldn't sleep well but would twitch all night long. I certainly was worried about him. I, myself, had been helped greatly by Bon-Tone and when I found it was all right for children, too, gave it to Frankie and it wasn't long before I could see a change in him. Constipation has been corrected and his appetite is fine. He eats everything and all I give him and I think he would eat all day long if I kept giving him food. He has gained 6 lbs. and is as solid as a rock. His cheeks are rosy now and his eyes bright and he plays the whole day long. He isn't a bit nervous now and sleeps soundly. It is a pleasure to see him wake up mornings now—right away he wants to eat. I shall never tire of singing the praises of this wonderful remedy—Bon-Tone."

ANOTHER STAGE FAVORITE IN FILM DEBUT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.

WASHINGTON, March 15 — Stage favorites who turned their backs on the movies in disdainful scorn before the talkies completely changed motion picture history are being featured more and more on the screen each day.

Take Laura Hope Crews, as Miss Crews has for many years been one of Broadway's best known actresses. No one ever heard that she ever looked at the movies or that the movies looked at her. Then she came to Hollywood to coach Norma Talmadge in the art of talking. Just as everyone thought, she had not been in Hollywood a month before Paramount signed her to play in "The Constant Wife," opposite Ruth Chatterton. Montague Love has also been signed.

Miss Crews' role on the stage has been as much advertised as that of Miss Chatterton. It will be interesting to see—or shall we say hear what she does in the talkies.

I HADN'T been in Washington two hours before one of my new scouts in Hollywood sent word that Norman Kerry had been signed to play opposite Dolores Costello in "Hearts in Exile." The signing of Norman had special significance because he is one of the leading men whose fate has been uncertain since the talkies have conquered the screen.

Right here is a good time to ask a question of our readers throughout the country. Would you rather see the stars you know in the talkies or some of the stage favorites who you have only been used to seeing their pictures in the newspapers, or perhaps on the stage? Let us hear from you.

LOUIS B. MAYER and family left Washington just a few hours before I arrived here. I had hoped to find out from him some of the rumors that have surrounded him since the purchase of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by William Fox. One of them is that Mayer will control all of the theaters in the Loew group. Another is that he will represent the United States as ambassador to Turkey. Neither story is verified. The nearest anyone has been able to get to his appointment as a diplomat is the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Mayer and their two daughters dined at the White House with President and Mrs. Hoover, Tuesday evening.

THE motion picture industry is presenting President Hoover with an interesting memento, a complete newsreel containing scenes of his inauguration. What a change two years have made in this respect. The first motion pictures of a President were made at the time President McKinley died. Blurred, badly photographed scenes of his funeral were taken and exhibited as a triumph of the art.

Today the film showing the scenes of President Hoover's inauguration will be viewed and talked with each figure standing out distinctly enough to show actual personality. Will H. Hays, head of the motion picture industry, will present this interesting reel of films to the new President in person here in Washington for that purpose.

NEVER having been in South Africa I cannot say what the climate is right now but it can't be any better than California. No climate could be any better. W. S. Vandyke is on his way to South Africa to film "Trader Horn." Duke is taking with him Edwina Booth, Duncan Rinaldo and a technical staff. Rinaldo was awarded the part of Little Peru in "Trader Horn" because of his work in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

HARRY COHN who discovered Dorothy Revere and brought her to fame in "The Submarine," can now claim for himself or back and say "I told you so." He has also been Miss Revere's best booster and Paramount has just notified his faith in the young lady by casting her for the feminine role in "Burlesque."

This, my dears, is one of the big parts in the picture and if I were in Hollywood Harry would probably tell me he had several other companies bidding for Miss Revere and that he is not going to let her remain with Paramount long as he has the plans for her. But I'm not just interview Harry without really talking with him. If he contradicts me, well and good, if he doesn't, well and good.

UNIVERSAL has the urge to make a sequel to "Lonesome." That is the picture that first brought Paul Fejos to the attention of Carl Laemmle, Jr., and led to him a steady job as a Universal director. Am willing to wager anything Fejos directs the sequel to "Lonesome" for the new spring bonnet that the sequel will not be made as cheaply as the original picture.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random by someone who reported these happenings for the writer of this column: Big Boy Williams, the secret sorrow of many women, learning to play polo. Have a care, Tommy Hitchcock, have a care. Gloria Swanson in all her theatrical jewelry lunching at the Double Headed Eagle.

Lydell Peck starting more gossip about his engagement to Janet Gaynor by driving with her to the beach. Corinne Griffith and Walter Morosco dashing to catch the train for New York. More about this later. Bessie Love, one of the most popular girls in Hollywood, entertaining friends at the Brash-fast Club. Louise Fazenda giving Technicolor a good break by wearing a red wig and a green dress. That's all today; see you tomorrow.

SCIENTIST SAYS DEAD CAN BE REVIVED

Moscow, March 14—"The dead can be brought back to life provided certain vital organs are still sound.

"Not only that, but often life is given after a person has been officially pronounced dead."

These are the claims of an eminent Russian scientist, Prof. Theodore Andreiev, noted for his experiments on the "physical life after death."

The medical world here, though amazed by the professor's assertions, are in a believing mood, from the fact that he has established for himself as the leader in his field of scientific activity.

As a corollary of his claims, it would appear that fantastic tales of fiction, such as in Edgar Allan Poe, may have a basis in reality of the future. "Burial Alive"—readers will remember the gripping Poe story—is apparently not just a writer's dream, if the Andreiev claims be true.

"The principle already has been demonstrated successfully," Andreiev said. "It only remains to perfect the technique for surgeons to apply practically the results of our experiments."

TELLS OF REVIVING HEART

His astounding claims came only a few months after revelations of experiments by Soviet scientists in which the severed head of a dog had been kept "alive" on pans and made to perform such natural functions as barking and blinking eyes.

The latest announcement of the scientists, however, paled the dog's head experiment by comparison.

Prof. Alexander Kuliabko, the pioneer of the research work, who has been engaged on it for 30 years, sustained the contention of his colleague. He said that, provided the heart, lungs and other essential organs are structurally intact, it should be possible in the future to revive corpses. The experiments cover many years and some of their most interesting results have been kept from the public hitherto.

Andreiev told in detail the macabre story of the successful revival of a human heart several years ago. The facts, as he vouched for them, are:

The corpse, as Andreiev described it, was on the operating table. It was far past midnight. Those who had been in the brilliantly-lighted little room.

Andreiev bent over the corpse and began injecting Ringer-Lokke solution and adrenalin solution around the heart tissues. Into the heart itself a group of assistants, leaning tensely over the table. Suddenly the chest of the dead one heaved. There was a violent heart beats. A gurgling sigh issued from the throat.

The hardened laboratory assistants were unnerved and ran away in fright. Andreiev remained, watching the resurrected heart, which continued to beat for 20 minutes.

Both Andreiev and Kuliabko warned against exaggerating their work. They said the majority of deaths are due to basic destruction of essential organisms, making revival impossible. Only when such basic destruction is not for some reason cease functioning, may life in the future be restored by science, they said.

Andreiev pointed out that the science of electro-cardiography of twenty-four hours after life lingers after the so-called "clinical death," that is, after the cessation of heartbeats and any sign of pulse. A remarkable series of electro-cardiographic charts of corpses immediately after death made in Moscow by Dr. L. I. Fogelson show clearly that the heart was alive, and that palpitations were recorded an hour after the man had been pronounced dead.

Prof. Andreiev gives physicians an opportunity to revive the heart, although Andreiev has revived many heart beats, palpitations have not ceased completely.

WOMEN SPLIT ON MILK BILL

The bill to require pasteurization of milk lay dead in the House, today, having been killed by a vote wherein the three first year women members, after a meeting of their maiden speeches in the Legislature, split on the measure, two favoring and one opposing it.

Mrs. Mary Livermore Harrows of Melrose, favored the bill as one necessary to protect the health of the children of the State. She said that until the recent conditions in the milk and ice trade had been instituted upon pasteurized milk, but that she now realized its great value.

Mrs. Emma E. Brigham of Springfield supported the measure as one necessary to meet a real emergency, and urged its speedy passage.

Dr. Marion Cowan Burrows of Lynn characterized it as a bad bill. It would discourage Massachusetts farmers, she said, and keep down the milk supply, thereby producing. The more milk is produced in Massachusetts, the less would be brought in from Canada and other points where the State would have no control over farm conditions.

River is Rising

Schenectady, N. Y., March 15—The Mohawk River continued to rise here at the rate of one foot per hour, although a few miles west of the city it has begun to recede due to the breaking of an ice jam at the Boston & Maine railroad bridge near Rotterdam Junction.

The domestic help problem is solved by placing a Dictomatic department and the help you advertised daily in the Boston Herald.

Mining Expert Is Heard in Locke Trial

New York, March 15—John Wellington Finch, Denver, Col., mining expert told a jury in federal court that a second-hand compressor plant, assay apparatus and a second-hand hoisting engine constituted the entire equipment of the Canario Copper Mines in the State of Sonora, Mexico.

Finch was testifying for the government at the trial of John and Herbert Locke and four associates, charged with using the mails to defraud investors of $5,000,000 through the sale of Canario stock.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Hungry Gentlemen

Lame Duck Politicians Think They Should Have New Jobs in Our Island Possessions.

Wherever the flag flies, efficient Mr. Hoover wants efficiency.

This fact is not printed here for American people. They know it. Nor for Mr. Hoover. He knows it.

It is for lame duck politicians who think the loss of their old jobs in this country entitles them to new jobs in our island possessions.

One post these hungry gentlemen have their eyes on is that of Governor-General of the Philippines, salary $18,000 a year. They may be hazy about the location, but they are sure of the figures. Patriotically, they will leave home comforts as soon as Mr. Hoover says the word. Or sooner.

Failing that, there is Porto Rico, salary $10,000 a year. Though the sacrifice is greater, they will not flinch if Mr. Hoover needs them, or even if he does not.

The President should be gratified at these handsome offers to help him in our troublesome tropics, but in the interests of efficiency he is not likely to accept them.

Doubtless he recalls the "efficiency records" of Politician Francis Burton Harrison in the Philippines, and Politician E. Mont Reily in Porto Rico.

Harrison wrecked the Philippines. Reily may not have wrecked Porto Rico, but he had less time than Harrison.

Even on the general public, these records have left no faint impression.

As for our efficient President, he would probably feel faint at the mere thought of repeating them.

Greatest Gambling House

Not a Good Thought in a Roomful

ONE OF THE ROULETTE TABLES IN THE MONTE CARLO GAMBLING CASINO

The croupiers in the gambling houses of France are the men that you see in this picture, on either side of the table, in charge of the roulette wheel that hour after hour tells the fate, losses or winnings, of the gamblers.

The wheel is divided into little black and white partitions numbered odd and even, with one zero.

The wheel is whirled in one direction, a little ivory ball is spun by the croupier in the other direction. As the little ball slows down it hits against the little partitions separating the numbers; finally it settles in one. That number and that color, red or black, wins.

The others lose. If the ivory ball drops into the zero, then all the even bets made on black or red, odd and even, "pass and monque," lose. The "pass and monque" means above or below the middle number.

This picture is one of many illustrations in an interesting book, "Confessions of a Croupier," written by one that worked for many years in the gambling houses of Monte Carlo, Biarritz, Deauville, and Aix-les-Bains.

Greatest of all gambling houses is the one at Monte Carlo, owned by the Prince of Monaco.

In that gambling house men and women from all over the world, lose enough money to pay an enormous annual income to the Prince, and enough more to provide for his tiny army and all the expenses of his little principality, more like a fairly good sized farm than "a country," on the edge of the beautiful Mediterranean.

The Prince of Monaco, luckily for himself, was polite to Napoleon. And when Napoleon took in Italian territory, he allowed the little Prince of Monaco to retain nominal independence.

Gambling is the most dangerous of the vices with the single exception, PERHAPS, of the drug habit.

Gambling makes men dishonest; ruins their families; makes ordinary honest effort seem not worth while. And it leads to crime of all kinds.

Racetracks in the State of New York, for instance, have sent more men to prison than any other one agency.

The atmosphere of the gambling room is unhealthy. The faces of the gamblers show plainly what gambling does to human nature.

In the crowd of educated men and women that you see around a table like this, there is NOT ONE sane, wholesome, useful thought.

BEWARE OF GAMBLING, it is death to ambition, death to real effort, and too often DEATH TO HONOR.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

I AM beginning to feel strongly in favor of increasing the Army and Navy.

No, I am not a militarist or a Prussian, or anything like that. But what this country needs is more decorative men! More picturesque men!

More men who have the leisure and the inclination to practice gallantry and cultivate beautiful manners. More men who take the time to read something besides the stock reports and the sporting pages. More men who know how to talk to women about something besides dollars and "deals" and niblicks and motor cars. More men who know how to pay graceful compliments and make love—and take the trouble to do it!

The Human Machine, who gulps his bacon and eggs like a dose of medicine, catches the 7:30 for the city every morning, and the 5:15 for the suburbs every evening, and goes to sleep over his newspaper after dinner, may be all-satisfying as a husband, but he is NOT decorative.

A coffee-scented peck on the cheek—a kiss on-the-fly, between the hall hatrack and the front door—may be a perfectly good husbandly kiss, but it does NOT fulfill all the emotional yearnings of a woman's heart.

A man who chases dollars all week, plays poker all Saturday night, and golf all Sunday afternoon, may be a good provider and a business genius. But as a lover he is just a dose of absent treatment.

Women are getting awfully tired of being just a sidedish in a busy man's life. They are weary of taking all their thrills vicariously at the movies. They are bored to tears with clumsy caveman love-making and vaudeville wit and humor.

What this world needs is more decorative men. Men with polish. Men who read poetry and can quote the philosophers. Men who are dashing and picturesque. Men who know a Corot from a carrot, and a fungus from a fuchsia, and can differentiate between a musical instrument and a saxophone.

Women's clubs, gigolos, bridge and Pomeranians will never take the place of romance and real companionship in a woman's life.

What the bored and restless modern woman should do is to stop driving her husband on to make more MONEY, and begin encouraging him to cultivate his charms, his talents and what is left of his mind.

She should sell her pearls and sables and buy hyacinths to feed her SOUL.

Take your nice, plain, useful old husband out, and put a little passementerie on his manners, a few rosettes on his conversation, and give him a dash of swank. Make him less a mere article of utility and more a thing of beauty. Make him DECORATIVE.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Life would be a perpetual fast hunt if a man were obliged to run down all the innuendoes, invectives, insinuations and misrepresentations which are uttered against him.—Beecher.

A politician thinks of the next election: a statesman, of the next generation.—Clarke.

The courage we desire and prize is not the courage to die decently, but to live manfully.—Carlyle.

I envy the knight two things their ignorance of evil to come, and their ignorance of what is said about them.—Voltaire.

I never make the mistake of arguing with people for whose opinions I have no respect. —Gibbon.

Nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself.—Garfield.

Behavior is the theory of manners

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOME day I'm going to do a messy murder right in the middle of Main street.

Then proceed to my doom turning handsprings of joy.

For whatever they do to me, it'll be worth it—

If only, just for once, I can bust loose on one of these human sidewinders—

Who weave aimlessly back and forth across the pavement.

Mooching along, obstructing the traffic—

Shuffling right under your Number Sixes when you're going full steam ahead.

From your grateful groans, dear reader, I gather that you are a fellow sufferer. You, too, have had your progress gummed up by these amblers. You, too, have longed to side-swipe their running boards and knock off their tail lights. Yes, indeed. All right, I'll invite you to the murder.

Lolliagging, they used to call it when I was a girl.

"DOWN WITH LOLLIGAGGERS!" says I.

If the energy I've wasted trying to pass these pests—

And the words I've said—

Were laid end to end—

There wouldn't be fire insurance enough in the U. S. A. to cover the rank.

Am I trying to be funny? I am not. I am issuing a serious protest against one of our meanest modern problems.

Lolliaggers are more than a traffic obstruction; they are a STATE OF MIND.

They walk that way because they think that way and their method of thinking is an obstruction of civilization as well as of traffic.

They are fuzzy-minded as well as wobble-footed.

They walk all over the sidewalk because they think all over the lot.

And while they infuriate you and me, they also make life tragic for themselves. They lead futile, frustrated existences and then wonder why.

Their lives are frustrated because they have never been taught to think straight, to decide what they want and then go after it.

They think as they walk.

They have no definite goal for their journey, no definite pattern for their lives.

They allow themselves to be distracted by every chance diversion.

They waste their energy on trivial distractions.

Then try to blame God or society for their own failure and confusion.

DON'T LOLLIGAG!

Plan your life.

Study yourself and your assets.

Don't bunk yourself. Make an honest audit.

Decide what you can reasonably hope to accomplish, how far you can reasonably hope to go. Then start in that direction.

Start and keep going!

Step on the gas and make it snappy.

Don't get in the other fellow's way, or your own.

You may not make Westminster or the Hall of Fame by this plan.

BUT YOU'LL GET SOMEWHERE, AND THAT'S MORE THAN YOU'LL DO IF YOU KEEP ON LOLLIGAGGING!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 15—Thoughts while strolling: Book shop for children only. With expert readers. Manicure parlor called: "Salon of Hand Culture." Gustave Tott of the Atlantic City Ritz. Whatever became of the apple pandowdy? Girls who try to look dreamy and merely look full of hop.

Irene Bordoni certainly resembles those vampish ladies in the illustrated French papers. The orchestra musicians you know are named Max or Gus. Sign: "Strive to be masterful." Yeah, and get socked in the eye. Who remembers when only men went out between acts to smoke? Charabelle Walsh and her mother.

Oscar Eagle, the stage director, a Gallipolis, O., boy, who made good in the city. I wouldn't hire one of those fat butlers. I couldn't keep from worrying how much he eats. The foolish look of Central Park riders whose horses stop while they go on. John and Cristo, the Broadway caterers.

Nearly everybody likes country sausage. But how difficult to get it. The dumb Marx brother with the dead pan. And the most talented of all. The sedate dignity of a mixerware store. Walter Bronson Dudley. That's Bide's real name. Window card: "Wanted—tall blondes for clerks in candy store."

Madam Frances, the dressmaker. And her husband, Nate Spingold. Claudette Colbert's trim ankles. Sign over stage entrance. "The most beautiful girls in the world pass through these portals." Charles Mitchell, the banker. Little rich children dressed in the uniform of the Royal Northwest Mounted.

Dance hall announces: "One hundred and fifty agreeable hostesses." Charles Hackett, the Metropolitan tenor. And an American. Coy girls in severe black gowns and ropes of imitation pearls. Broadway doesn't seem the same without Walter Kingsley. Whatever became—and I dont care that!—of swagger sticks?

Women in riding habits who lunch alone at table windows. And flappers who use lorgnettes. A German restaurant with a fat frauleln yodeling: "Go to Sleep, My Hay-ha-bee!" And those dim lit cafes that suggest hand holding and whispered soft things. The polite red-haired girl at the Algonquin newsstand.

ALMOST every year they give a dinner for Knute Rockne, the Notre Dome coach, and it is one dinner that bars evening dress. Mr. Rockne's manner is hard boiled and he does not care to step out of character even at a dinner in his honor.

THERE is a lady novelist, too, who insists upon wearing informal dress at formal dinners. Her excuse is she lives alone and has no one to powder her back. She forms to the right and no pushing, you big ape.

THE other day I saw a stalwart plain clothes man attached to police headquarters. It seems only a few years ago since he scurried to my cry of "copy" in a newspaper shop. There are times when I do not feel so old—that is when you consider the Rocky Mountains—but such episodes inspire a few extra sly peeks in the mirror.

A CHARACTER on Tenth Avenue is a hatless, shoeless and bewhiskered old fellow with hair falling around his shoulders. He seems oblivious of the attention he creates. A shop keeper along the street tells me he is a religious zealot who believes all ills are due to wearing hats and shoes and it was further declared that he came to the street some ten years ago in a wheel chair. Today he is walking and apparently enjoying good health.

ON Houston st. is a spaghetti salon conducted by one of those shaggy-haired baritones who once bellowed and heaved a mean chest in second rate opera. His hands are covered with gaudy rings and his clothes would rate high at a convention of tin-horn gamblers. Yet it is whispered a certain lady of remarkable talents and great fame, who is a frequent patron of the place, is ga-ga about him. True or not, such gossip is one of the things that slows up New Yorkers in their yawning.

A STYLE shark says the vogue for full evening suits for men is only temporary. We had an idea the boys would tire of unknown finger snappers ordering them to serve the coffee later. The double breasted dinner coat was popular chiefly because it distinguished a guest from a waiter.

The Modern Romans

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IN the land that the Caesars once ruled, and that through them ruled the world, the genius of modern practical science has just completed a work that would have delighted the soul of the great Julius, for, if living today, might be the chief magnate of the industrial world.

Italian engineers have driven a shaft three-and-a-half miles in length through the solid rock of Monte Oro, lining it throughout with steel and concrete, and ending it with a chute that falls nearly two thousand feet in perpendicular height at a slope of 45 degrees.

Water is drawn from Lake Garda, lying at an altitude of 2150 feet in the Alps, and thence is passed through the shaft piercing the heart of the mountain which separates it from the lowland where Lake Garda lies, four miles away and more than a third of a mile nearer sea level.

To guard against the mad rush of the water down the one-to-one grade of the chute, which would look absolutely vertical if seen from a short distance in front, it has been necessary to depart from the usual manner of receiving falling water with vertically placed hydro-electric generators, and to partially tame its fury before it strikes by first turning it upward against gravity and then causing it to revolve around water wheels connected with horizontal generators.

Lake Garda is surrounded by cities and industrial plants, a part of that great modern development which is turning the ancient battle plain of Lombardy into one of the busiest zones of human labor on the earth. It is to advance the activities of this region, where the successors of the Romans are learning to adapt the conquering methods of Rome's great imperator to the necessities of a new age that the little lake on the overlooking Alps has been constrained to contribute the potential energy of its high-placed waters. Verona, the city of Juliet and Romeo, will be one of the long-famed places to have its storied streets and squares, including the "Tomb of Juliet" itself, illuminated with electricity born on a purple mountain! Shakespeare could paint that with words!

Things like this gather strange interest from the centers of a great past, setting them out like towering structures against the sunset. Here are the beginnings of realization for Signor Mussolini's dream of a re-arisen Rome. To the imagination these things grow mightier than themselves by the memory of the world-empire which floats about them. It is Rome rising from her vast graves to confront the world with a power which has aroused her like thunder shock, and seeing her new children, who still bear the features of the old, grappling with its novel problems of life, and following its ancient road to glory and power with the old Roman courage.

No nation should feel a twinge of envy at the assertion that in 1928 Italy led all the world in increase of use of electric power.
